SANTA YNEZ

A Revamped Hotel in Los Olivos Steeped in History

Originally built in 1886 as a stopover for stagecoaches traveling between L.A. and S.F. during California's Gold Rush and later as a hangout during the Prohibition era, The Inn at Mattei's Tavern has also attracted high-profile guests from John D.

Rockefeller to Clark Gable throughout its fabled history. This summer, the landmark property (now owned by Malibu-based Brian R. Strange and Shamra Strange, who've teamed up with Auberge Resorts Collection) reopens as a luxurious destination for a new kind of a traveler. In the heart of Santa Ynez wine country, the reimagined 67-room property exudes nostalgic Americana with charming white clapboard cottages that surround the main guest house. Nearby, there's the serene pool, an onsite restaurant and a full-service wellness center dubbed the Lavender Barn. History buffs needn't fret, the iconic water tower is still perfectly in place. 2350 Railway Ave., Los Olivos, 805-695-4783; aubergeresorts.com.

LOS ANGELES

Bestia's Little Sister Saffy's Springs Up on Fountain

Ever wonder what it would look like if the perpetually popular DTLA restaurants Bestia and Bavel had a sibling? Behold Saffy's on Fountain Avenue, the much-anticipated casual eatery in East Hollywood named after husband-and-wife team Ori Menashe and Genevieve Gergis's actual daughter, Saffron. Featuring a bustling curvy pink bar, stained glass windows and plenty of old-world Moroccan flair, the new eatery features delightful renditions of traditional Middle Eastern dishes from red snapper tagine and green falafel to shawarma plates and skewers. Following in the footsteps of its older siblings, it also looks like its gearing up to be just as popular. 4845 Fountain Ave., L.A., 424-699-4845; saffysla.com.

MALIBU

A Supermodel-Designed Line With Japan at Its Core

This summer, as part of Adeam’s ten-year anniversary celebration, designer Hanako Maeda teamed up with Malibu-based supermodel Carolyn Murphy on a collection that celebrates their shared love of Japanese culture. Murphy spent her early modeling days in Tokyo before going on to become one of the world’s most recognizable faces in fashion (she was even C Magazine’s inaugural covergirl way back when). For the new collaboration, she drew from memories of Japanese ceramics and ’90s minimalism along with favorite pieces from her own wardrobe. The result is a summer-ready collection of tailored pieces in sustainable textiles, such as the Kyoto dress in biomass cotton linen, which was inspired by a vintage trench coat from Murphy’s wardrobe. As for Murphy’s go-to beach look this summer, it’s the effortless Yama shorts paired with the Sora hoodie—the perfect set to wear for an early morning dawn patrol and to throw on après surf. adeam.com.

NAPA VALLEY

Wine Country’s Cultural Festival Celebrates 16 Years

Festival Napa Valley bills itself as the ten best days of summer for good reason. This month, the 16th season of the cherished valley-wide musical event opens at Charles Krug with Carlo Ponti conducting Leonard Bernstein’s “Overture to Candide” performed by Festival Orchestra Napa. The days that ensue feature a firehose stream of wine, culture and gourmet meals at world-class establishments including HALL, Quintessa, Far Niente, Nickel & Nickel, The Four Seasons, Bardessono and Trinchero Family Estates. Don’t miss performances from Grammy Award-winning violinist Joshua Bell and internationally acclaimed soprano Larisa Martínez, The Young People’s Chorus of New York City, Trisha Yearwood, the annual Dance Gala (with talent from New York City Ballet and San Francisco Ballet) and, of course, the valley’s beloved Festival Orchestra Napa. July 15-25; festivalnapavalley.org.
