Is there any sin so great that even God can't forgive it?

When Jesus carried all of your sins on the Cross, He didn't pick and choose.

He carried all of them, even the most atrocious.

It's one of the most amazing aspects about His amazing work of atonement.

He forgave heroes of the Bible, such as David, who not only committed adultery, but murdered an innocent man.

He forgave Abraham, who allowed his wife, Sarah, to sleep with pharaoh, because he was afraid of what this powerful ruler would do to him if he refused.

He forgave Paul, even though when he was a Pharisee he worked tirelessly to persecute the church and imprison all Jews who had converted to Christ.

He forgave Peter, even though this powerful apostle denied Him three times in His greatest hour of need.

The sin He cannot forgive is when someone rejects the One who seeks to forgive him/her.

If you reject the Holy Spirit, which is the One God has sent to convict you of your sins, then there is absolutely nothing more that God can do for you (Matthew 12:31,32).

You have willfully decided you don't want Christ in your life.

God has given all humans free will, the ability to accept or reject Him, to receive forgiveness of sins or to not receive forgiveness of sins.

Once you decide that you don't want to be saved, then God has no choice but to honor your decision, making it impossible for God to forgive you.
