

UK Government Official Trips On Acid, Signs Relief Bill

Sen. Peter Schiefke of Islington, UK was castigated on Monday for missing a deciding vote on a long overdue stimulus bill's passage through Parliament.

Peter Schiefke signs bill S.686 — 118th Blimey House

Schiefke, a hold out on bill S. 686 had ingested a toxic amount of the substance “mescaline” just moments before the official vote took place. The vote continued in his absence, resulting in a deadlock which the aloof politician remedied by returning several hours later to cast the deciding vote, still coming down off of his trip.

When questioned why he was absent by News 3 anchor Klime Wert, Schiefke sneered with his upper lip tucked into his dry teeth, portraying a non-speaking, drugged but pleasant beaver-like persona.

Schiefke appeared before a judge on Monday after being charged with illegal drug use and beaver appropriations. He has been sentenced to a 3 day work program at the Islington zoo.
