

VERTEBRAL SUBLUXATION

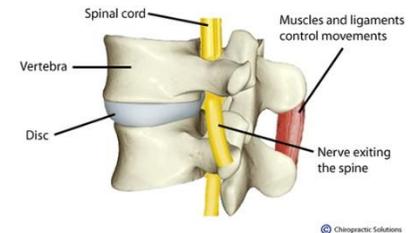

What is Vertebral Subluxation? Vertebral subluxation is the basis behind what Chiropractic is! In simple terms if your spine is misaligned it will cause a variety of problems with the rest of your body. Vertebral subluxation is a term used to describe an abnormal positioning of a vertebra, enough to interfere with the nerve impulses (messages) sent from the brain to the body. A subluxation is not as severe as a dislocation but can lead to many symptoms that can contribute to pain and or loss of function.

The central nervous system (brain, and spinal cord) is the master system that allows your life force to control all of the other systems combined. A subluxation can alter or prevent the flow of impulses from the brain to the rest of the body.

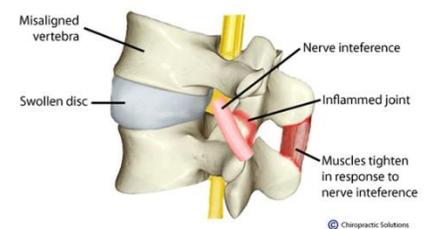

Vertebral subluxation, over time, can cause disease, or lack of health because it prevents other parts of the system to work at its maximum potential. Symptoms can include pain, radiating pain, sharp pain, shooting pain, headache, numbness, tingling, weakness, increase or decrease in body temperature, redness around the effected area, swelling and sometimes there are no symptoms at all.

This condition is so far reaching as to affect your entire nervous system, it can lead to several symptoms. The concern for you is that many symptoms may be diagnosed by your family doctor as something entirely different.

What can Chiropractic do? A Chiropractor can adjust your spine back into alignment. Chiropractic adjustments to the spine and extremities have been tested by time and proven repeatedly to be invaluable in restoration of the function of the spine and extremities. This in turn allows the nervous system to function properly and allows your body to work properly.

A Doctor of Chiropractic is the only doctor who is trained to detect and correct vertebral subluxation. Chiropractic is devoted to correcting abnormal structural conditions. See your Chiropractor regularly to ensure you have a healthy spine.
