Women Road Warriors is a lively talk show featuring experts and celebrity guests on various topics that empower women. It aims to 'power women on the road to success.' The show is humorous, entertaining, educational, and sometimes quirky with lively banter between Shelley Johnson, Kathy Tuccaro, and their guests. Women Road Warriors is ranked by Podcast Tonight as one of the best podcasts for women. FeedSpot has rated it among the Top 100 Women Podcasts worldwide and in the 35 Best Women Empowerment Podcasts worldwide. Women Road Warriors is available on all the major podcast distribution channels and <https://women-road-warriors.captivate.fm>.

Women Road Warriors and the Women's Power Network are showing their star power. Tell us about the unique value proposition your show holds.

Women Road Warriors is an award-winning women's empowerment talk show podcast. In keeping with the title, the show is designed to "power women on the road to success" in every profession and walk of life. We engage our guests in lively conversations that educate and entertain women on subjects they want or need to know. It is designed to inspire women of all ages to achieve things they never thought possible. We also tackle tough topics to educate women on serious issues that marginalize them so we can exact change. We have discussed things like human trafficking and the abuse of women and girls. Our goal is to be shepherds of positive change.

Our guest roster has been amazing. We showcase women trailblazers, success stories, and experts who are making an impact on the advancement of women. We feature health and wellness experts and celebrities who share their knowledge and passion. Our episodes offer special nuggets and takeaways from guests that listeners can savor. We have featured Hollywood icons, women comedians, motivational coaches, athletes, reality show stars, best-selling authors, podcast hosts, health and wellness experts, business/finance gurus, private detectives, and others. Some of our guests have included actresses Ruta Lee and Valerie Bertinelli, country singers Chapel Hart, Sam Roark, and Clare Dunn, comedians Monique Marvez, Karen Morgan, and Jan McInnis, along with renowned attorney and V.P. Emeritus of U.N. Women USA Lucia Kanter St. Amour who discussed the basics of everyday negotiation techniques.

Besides some A-list celebrities, we will be featuring Rhonda Britten, the first life coach on TV who had the hit NBC reality show Starting Over. She will talk about overcoming fear. Listeners can also learn what it's like to be a female private eye with Bari Kroll and Jen Rosant who have appeared on network TV shows and are hosting a new podcast called Private Eyes.

We cover it all. We like to think of our show as a safe haven of knowledge and a beacon of empowerment where all women can feel more connected to follow their dreams and "aspire higher." Topics change each week. We also have the Women's Power Network where women can listen to high-powered, popular podcasts for women all in one place on a page they can bookmark. We are adding more podcasts to the network all the time. It takes a village and we are committed to uniting the village of women so it becomes a thriving metropolis. We have more exciting plans for the Women's Power Network on the horizon.

How has the Women Road Warriors podcast made an indelible mark on celebrity and culture?

Our show celebrates women with their knowledge and their journeys. We give established and up-and-coming celebrities a place to discuss their passion, their lessons, their obstacles, and their victories. Celebrities come from all walks of life, too. We celebrate women from all professions who have made a mark and positive impact on the lives they touch. Life is about journeys. Our listeners want to know our guests' journeys and how culture has changed over the decades as they championed their various causes. We always offer new voices a chance to be heard to help women become their best selves. Sometimes the affirmation of one person who "made it" is all it takes to change a person's life. That impacts culture. It gives many women a champion when they feel like they are alone in their quest to succeed. The women's empowerment niche is way too small. We want to be the vanguard of that area by offering a neutral place where all women can listen and be inspired by informative, entertaining, and candid discussions.

Share your vision for the upcoming months.

We will be featuring some big celebrities. Stay tuned on our socials. We would love to feature more celebs as well as high-powered experts from all professions. If you have a message and a mission, we want to hear it. Some of our upcoming shows will feature women from popular reality shows along with New York Times bestselling authors, therapists, and highly successful women in business. We like our show to be a mix of entertaining, funny, and informative topics. Motivational speakers, successful entrepreneurs, authors, and people who can empower women are always on our radar.
