

Type & Terpene Guide for Mississippi Medical Marijuana

The Health Council of Mississippi & Truman Cannabis

How to Match Strains with Medical Conditions

- 1 – Identify medical ailments with the highest probability of being helped with cannabis
- 2 – Show the most effective terpenes to treat these ailments
- 3 – Group the most important terpenes for each ailment into Terpene Families
- 3 - Match Terpene Families to available strains in the dispensary
- 4 - Use the “Indica/Sativa Ratio” to show which strains are best for daytime or nighttime use

Strains with the same top three dominate terpenes are put into “Terpene Families” which share similar taste, smell, and effects. It is also useful when a patient requests a strain that is not available by showing similar strains and can help patients avoid an unpleasant cannabis experience. For example, if they don’t like the peppery and spiciness of caryophyllene, this helps them avoid it for a better cannabis experience.

The Indica/Sativa Ratio shows if the strain will make a patient more relaxed (Indica) or energetic (Sativa). The first number is the Indica Percentage, and the second number is the Sativa Percentage. For example, if the ratio is 60/40, this means the strain is 60% Indica and 40% Sativa.
