Dreams will kiss my waking with visions filled with us.
 But first, a world of waiting will take me to the dust.
 Now I rest contently, no pains, no mortal aches.
 This hill will hold me gently until the morning breaks.

How will I remember? Time slides into the past.
 Our days were bright and tender, but never meant to last.
 Lost are all my longings to linger here with you.
 I feel a new belonging, a home that holds you too.
