

A Season of Little Adventures

You don't need a cross-country tour to make spring riding special. This is the season of the micro-adventure:

A Saturday morning ride before the rest of the neighborhood wakes up

A "let's see where this road goes" turn that becomes your new favorite route

A quick meet-up that turns into a group ride and a lot of laughter at the next stop

Spring gives us permission to be spontaneous again. It's the perfect time to say yes to the ride.

A Gentle Reminder "From the Road" (and the Potholes)

Of course, spring also comes with a few traditions we could do without —like surprise potholes, leftover winter gravel, and the first big wave of drivers who seem shocked to discover motorcycles exist.

So it's a good moment to ease back in:

Check tire pressure and tread

Make sure the battery is happy

Test brakes and lights

And maybe stretch those riding muscles that have been hibernating too

Think of it as a reunion tour: everyone's excited, but it's best if the instruments are tuned first.
