Resource Line Update

The Ramsey Crisis Nursery Resource Line is now open to the public! With the help of our volunteers, we are able to answer the phone to provide parents with community-based resources. In this way, we are able to get to know the families that we will partner with in the future and make community connections that may help accelerate our overnight care services.

Why Do People Call Ramsey Crisis Nursery?

- 40% of callers are social workers or other community support workers looking for more information and resources.
- 30% of callers are parents looking for a place for their children to stay while they receive medical care (both emergency and non-emergency situations).
- 30% of callers are parents or concerned individuals that are looking for a break, parenting support, or care for their children while they work.

For support and community resources, please connect with one of Ramsey Crisis Nursery's Family Advocate Volunteers by calling 651-356-8678

It takes a village to raise children & we aim to be a trusted part of that village. You do not have to parent alone.
