

I'm not robot!

Jerry baker 23 blast death

23 blast cast jerry baker death. What happened to jerry baker 23 blast death. How did jerry baker die from 23 blast. 23 blast movie jerry baker death. 23 blast true story jerry baker death. How did jerry baker from 23 blast die in real life.
Jerry baker football player death 23 blast.

Home Subjects Math Science History Arts & Humanities Social Studies Engineering & Technology Business Other Resources Study Guides Leaderboard All Tags ? Unanswered Random Tags Movies Bram grew up in the small town of Corbin, Kentucky, the real life film location for 23 Blast. Initially headed toward an athletic scholarship, it took an elective drama class to fuel a love of acting, inspiring a new future at Loyola University in Los Angeles. Studying under renown acting coach Michelle Danner, Bram soon landed a guest spot on General Hospital as well as a recurring role as Travis on Days of Our Lives. Soap opera exposure provided a casting opportunity for the web series California Heaven, where Bram soon found himself portraying lead character Dominic Corrigan.
He continued in television with guest appearances on such shows as Dirt with Courtney Cox, Three Rivers on NBC, and the CW's 90210. Balancing film and television, Bram secured roles in the films Buried Alive, The Next Race and 40 Hours as well as enjoying frequent advertising and print work in his spare time.

Most recently, Bram's commercial was selected as one of the coveted top 5 Doritos super bowl ads. In 23 Blast, as Jerry Baker, Bram was able to deliver a layered performance, balancing the complexity of a troubled teenager yet at the same time expose his vulnerability and compassion. Bram's personal relationship with Jerry laid the groundwork for a clear understanding of how he wanted the audience to embrace the character and expose the Jerry that very few people knew. As co-writer of 23 Blast, Bram relied on first-hand experience as Travis Freeman's real life teammate. "I was a freshmen when Travis was a senior. Freshmen are always in awe of seniors, but everyone watching Travis was in awe. The opposing teams never knew he was blind, so they were in totally disbelief when they found out." When it became evident this was no ordinary story but one of great faith, Bram realized Travis' message of hope and encouragement reached way beyond his accomplishments on the football field. For Bram, delivering that message became the motivation and driving force for writing the script. Jerry Baker died after falling from a roof that he was working to provide for his family. With 23 Blast and the final picture of Jerry Baker on the football field, I was inspired by Travis Freeman's life as a Corbin, Kentucky native. Security Death Index. What was Ashley's name? Mark Hapka portrays Travis in the film. The film also featured Stephen Lang, Alexa PenaVega, Max Adler, and Becky Ann Baker. Is Travis Freeman a member of 23 Blast? The book "Lights Out" tells the story of a southern Kentucky football legend, as well as the film "23 Blast." Travis Freeman was only 12-year-old when he lost his vision, but being blind didn't stop him from playing football. He shared his story with Parkway Ministries in Corbin on Sunday. In 23 Blast, who was supposed to play Jerry? Travis was supposed to be played by Bram Hoover, but he was recast as Jerry. Patty Wheatley was cast by Baker's wife Becky Ann Baker. Fred Dalton Thompson, Timothy Busfield, and Kevin Cooney were among Baker's former coworkers. In 23 Blast, what happened to Travis Freeman? Travis was taken to the University of Kentucky emergency room for surgery for a severe sinus infection behind his eyes that doctors diagnosed as cavernous sinus thrombosis. "Cavernous Sinus Thrombosis (CST) is a clot in one of the brain's major veins," says Dr. What happened to Jerry Baker? Jerry passed away on May 26, 2007, sadly. Big Jerry, his father, died three years later in 2010 after a long battle with cancer. Despite the fact that his life was cut short, I am grateful that he had the opportunity to be a part of Kailee's life for nearly five years. Is Jerry Baker, the gardener still alive and well?

Jerry Baker, the self-described "America's Master Gardener" and a well-known home-remedy book and product huckster, died in March of this year at the age of 85. Where can I find 23 Blast?

Prime Video for 23 Blast. Who was responsible for the blast of 23? Dylan Baker directed the 2013 American sports drama film Bram Hoover Toni Hoover 23 Blast/Screenplay 23 Blast.
Bram and Toni Hoover wrote the film, which is based on the story of Travis Freeman, a Kentucky adolescent who loses his sight but overcomes the challenges of his disability and continues to pursue his football dreams. Is the film 23 Blast based on true events? The film begins with scenes from Travis' younger years playing little league football with his best friend, Brady Baker (Bram Hoover).
Travis is completely blind overnight after a rare infection causes the boys to grow up and play high school football together. Travis is unlikely to be able to play football again.

In the film 23 Blast, who are the actors? The production is directed/produced by Dylan Baker (Spider-Man 2) and written by Bram Hoover (who also plays Jerry Baker), and Toni Hoover (who also plays Jerry Baker). In 23 Blast football, who is the preacher? In fact, in the film, Travis Freeman plays a preacher.

Although that scene didn't make much sense to me at the time, now that I know the preacher is a grown-up Travis, I appreciate it even more. By: Michael D. McClellan | Imagine: You're twelve years old, and you wake up one morning and you're completely blind. Now, imagine finding the courage to rise up and continue following your dream to play high school football. If it sounds like the stuff of movies you're on the right track; 23 Blast opens on 600 screens nationwide on October 24, and the movie is loosely based on the life of Travis Freeman, the Corbin, KY native who was stricken with a severe sinus infection and bounces back to become the first blind football player in the country. I caught up with Travis to talk faith, football, and overcoming incredible odds.
Take me back to when it all happened. When did you know something was wrong? Travis Freeman: I had a migraine headache for nine straight days. My parents took me to a couple of different doctors, and they said it was just a headache and that it would go away just as quickly as it had come. Well, I woke up on the morning of the tenth day and the headache was gone, but my left eye was beginning to hurt. Then it began to swell. I went to the eye doctor, and he was looking for an eye injury but didn't find anything wrong. He said to go home and put some ice on it, and it should be better by morning. I woke up that Saturday, July 3, and the eye was still hurting, and the swelling was worse. That's when I went back to the eye doctor and he looked behind my eye, and that's when he saw the infection. They rushed me to the University of Kentucky hospital, and admitted me into the ER and began running all kinds of different tests. My temperature spiked at that point, and my head continued to swell. They eventually found out that I had Cavernous Sinus Thrombosis, which is an extremely rare but an extremely deadly form of a sinus infection. The doctor said that 70% of the people who have what I had die, and of the 30% that survive, only a very small percentage have normal brain activity afterward. I was only the second case in the world where the infection only affected the eye. So in less than 48 hours I went from perfect 20/20 vision to no vision at all. You grew up in Corbin, KY, which is where the movie is based. 23 Blast focuses, in part, on the relationship between you and your friend, Jerry Baker. Please tell me about both. Travis Freeman: Growing up in Corbin was a great experience.
I had a great family and church life, and God truly blessed me in that way. Jerry was a friend of mine growing up. When I lost my sight, I didn't want any of my friends to come to the hospital to see me. One day there was a knock at the door and it was Jerry. He hung out with me all day, and helped me understand that my friends were still going to accept me, and that everything was going to be okay. Jerry was very instrumental in getting me out of my shell that first year. Once we got into high school, Jerry started going in a different direction. He wasn't a believer, and he got wrapped up in drugs and alcohol. A few years ago he was involved in a roofing accident and was paralyzed. He didn't take care of himself and died a few years later as a result of complications from the accident. So it's really a story of two friends and how they deal with tragedy and adversity differently. I looked at the challenge and disability that came into my life and decided to overcome it, and, unfortunately, Jerry went down the path of feeling sorry for himself. Tell me about your high school coach. Travis Freeman: Coach Farris was amazing. He believed in me before I believed in myself. My parents knew that I loved football, and that I wanted to be a part of the team again, so they went to Coach Farris and told him that they wanted me to be a part of the team.
They stressed that they didn't expect me to play, but that it would be a good way to work out and get some exercise. Coach Farris simply refused to those conditions. He told them that if Travis Freeman was going to be associated with his team, then he was going to play. He convinced my parents that he had a plan that would work. He told them that I'd be the center, that the team would help me to and from the huddle, and that they would line me up over the ball. And then, once the ball was snapped, I would make contact with my opponent and it would be just like anyone else blocking until the play was over. So, in August of 1994, I stepped onto a football field as America's first blind football player. '23-Blast' Movie Poster . What position did you play before becoming blind? Travis Freeman: In the movie I'm portrayed as a running back who becomes a center after I lose my sight. The real story is that I was a lineman the entire time. When I lost my sight, I moved from tackle to center. What were some of the challenges you faced after being stricken? Travis Freeman: The entire first year was a challenge. I was going through everything your normal seventh grader goes through, plus my body was adapting to the trauma that it had just experienced. I had to learn to live life all over again, because everything that I had done for the first twelve years of my life meant nothing at that point. I had to learn how to walk again, eat by myself, dress myself, read braille, study…I had to learn to live life all over again. So it was a matter of setting goals, achieving those goals, and moving on to the next one. Faith is important to you. Please tell me about your faith, and how it sustained you. Travis Freeman: The grace of God brought me through it. I don't remember this story, because I was on a lot of medication at the time, but my parents say that when I lost my sight I told them that I was going to see again. And if not, then I couldn't wait to see what God had in store for me. That was the attitude that I had from the very beginning. I never questioned it. I never asked why this had happened to me, and never asked God why He had done this to me. I just embraced the fact that God is good, God is in control, and God has my best interests in mind. I would not be where I am today without faith. What was it like playing blind? Travis Freeman: My teammates were great. They embraced it from the very beginning. They dealt with it, and it wasn't anything out of the ordinary for them. We never told the other team that I was blind. They never knew, and we didn't tell the officials. We wanted it to be normal, and we didn't want anyone doing anything any differently just because I was blind. Tell me about the film. Travis Freeman: My autobiography, Lights Out – Living in a Sightless World, was just released, and the movie 23 Blast will be released on 600 screens across the country on October 24. It's just been a fun experience. It's not the Travis Freeman story, but it is a movie loosely inspired by the events in my life. I was approached several years ago by the lady who eventually wrote the screenplay. She said she wanted to base it on parts of my life. Well, she came back a few years later, and she said that she'd lined up a producer and a director, and that she was coming to Corbin to film this movie. So in April, 2012, they filmed 23 Blast in 23 days. And now, here it is, about to be released on 600 screens nationwide. I really believe God's hand is at work in this project. What message do you want to share with those who watch the movie? Travis Freeman: I want people to be inspired to overcome the obstacles that they face in their lives. I want them to understand that disability doesn't equal inability. We all have disabilities and obstacles in our lives that we have to overcome, but those obstacles are not insurmountable mountains. I just want people to be encouraged and inspired, and to realize that whatever their circumstances, they don't have to be defined by them. A West Virginia native, Michael D. McClellan's celebrity interviews appear on his web site, FifteenMinutesWith.Com, and include superstars Pharrell Williams and Vince Gill; Nobel Prize winners Art McDonald and Takaaki Kajita; Grammy winners Al Jarreau, Melissa Manchester, Keb Mo, and Big Daddy Kane; racing legend Mario Andretti; NFL Hall of Fame quarterback Jim Kelly; and NBA legends Larry Bird, Magic Johnson, Julius Erving, and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar.