EDUCATIONAL & KEY INSIGHTS

What Tax-Related Documents Might Need Notarization?

IRS Forms (Power of Attorney & Tax Representation) – If you're authorizing someone to handle your tax matters, you may need to notarize IRS Form 2848 (Power of Attorney and Declaration of Representative) or IRS Form 8821 (Tax Information Authorization).

Business Tax Compliance Documents – Business owners may need to notarize financial statements, affidavits, or compliance forms for tax purposes.

Self-Employed & Freelancer Agreements – If you're self-employed or a freelancer, notarizing contracts and agreements can help protect your tax deductions and financial records.

Affidavits for Deductions or Tax Credits – Some tax credits and deductions (such as certain real estate exemptions) may require notarized affidavits.

How RON Makes Tax Season Easier

- No Office Visits Needed – Get your tax documents notarized online, anytime.
- Fast & Secure – Our RON platform ensures compliance and security for all notarized forms.
- Accepted Nationwide – Remote Online Notarization is legally recognized and can be used for IRS and financial forms.

CALL TO ACTION

Who Can Benefit from Notarization This Tax Season?

- Tax Professionals & Accountants – Ensure your clients' IRS forms are properly notarized.
- Business Owners & Entrepreneurs – Get compliance documents in order for tax filings.
- Freelancers & Independent Contractors – Notarize agreements for financial protection.

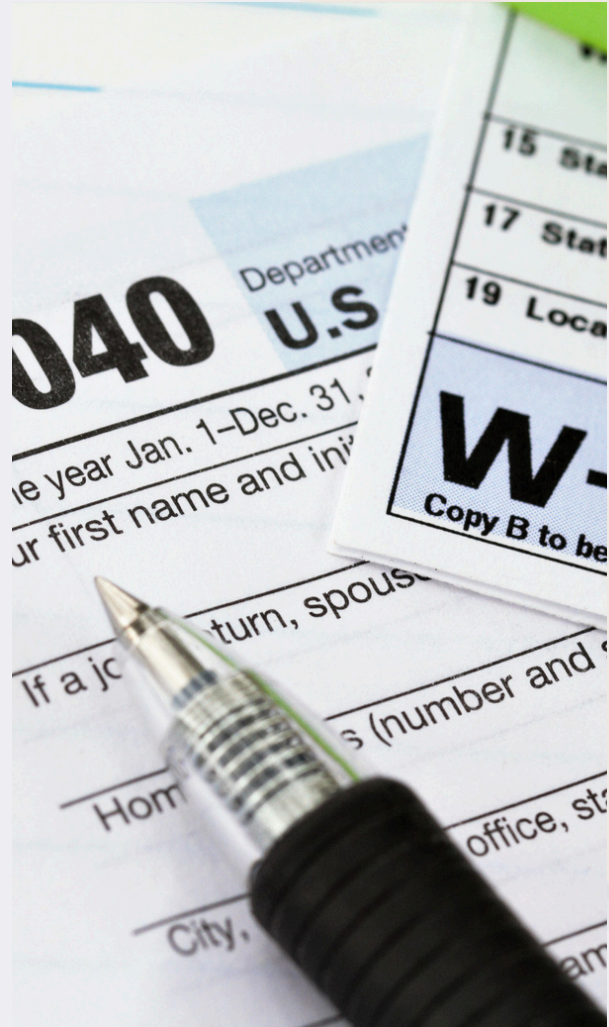

Common Mistakes to Avoid During Tax Season

- ❌ Not Notarizing Required Forms – Some IRS and financial documents require notarization, and skipping this step can delay processing.
- ❌ Waiting Until the Last Minute – Notarizing documents last-minute can cause unnecessary stress—get it done ahead of time!
- ❌ Using an Unverified Notary – Ensure you're working with a certified online notary like Legally Notarized for legally valid documents.
