Lindsay Parker

Lindsay was raised on the family farm in Three Hills and has definitely been an "animal person" since a very young age. It really did not matter what kind of animal it was: moose calf, pronghorn antelope fawn, deer fawn, elk fawn, ducklings, puppies, kittens, or lambs, Lindsay has nursed them all back to health. Her Mom would often tell her that "this small creature needs a tincture of Lindsay" and soon it was healthy again.

Lindsay graduated from the Three Hills high school in 2006 and started on her secondary education at McGill University in Montreal, in May 2011 she graduated with a degree in Animal Science and Environmental Studies. Lindsay was active in campus life while at McGill, serving on many different committees and participating on the woodsman Team.. Recently Lindsay was admitted to the Western College of Veterinary Medicine in Saskatoon in the Class of 2015 where she proudly proclaims that she is a sheep farmer!

We always either seem to either be taking Lindsay to the airport or picking her up from one. In 2004, Lindsay made her first major trip to Antarctica with Students on Ice. Since then she has chased whales on a sailboat in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, traveled to Africa to volunteer at the Mokoldi Game Reserve in Botswana, participated in the Vets in the wild program sponsored by the University of Pretoria in South Africa, gone cage diving with Great White Sharks, been bungee jumping at Victoria Falls in Zambia and she is only 23!
