WINSTON-SALEM

Ex-prosecutor: Epstein grand jury transcripts likely to disappoint.

Scottie Scheffler dominates in British Open victory for his 2nd major this year.

WHERE YOUR STORY LIVES Monday, July 21, 2025

journalnow.com

NC HERITAGE AWARD

UNCG professor Gaurang Doshi plays Indian Classical music on a 25-string sarod

ALLISON LEE ISLEY PHOTOS, JOURNAL

Gaurang Doshi, who teaches Indian classical music at UNC Greensboro, is a recipient of the 2025 N.C. Heritage Award. Doshi plays several instruments, including the sarod, which he holds here.

aurang Doshi put a lot of thought into his answer to what seemed at first a very simple question.

Earlier this month, Doshi – an adjunct professor at UNCG among his other jobs was presented the North Carolina Heritage Award, the state's highest recognition for folk and traditional artists. Unusual, to say the least, for someone steeped in Indian classical music. No fiddles, quilts or banjos. No guitars or harmonizing, either. Nothing to suggest what many of us might think of first if asked about North Carolina culture and heritage. "Was I surprised?,"

SCOTT SEXTON

he said when we met in person to hear him playing a 25-stringed, no-fret instrument called a sarod. "I've thought a lot about your question. I'm extremely grateful for every opportunity this city, the state and this country has given me. ... Perhaps if I had won the lottery, I'd be surprised about that.

"But (the Heritage Award)? I'm more happy than surprised."

'Software easy, music is hard'

Doshi's journey from Rajkot, India to the United States was not a direct path. It took gumption, hard work and faith that things would work out.

"I definitely always had aspirations," said Doshi, 56. "One must when moving from a developing country to a developed one."

neering, started a first career in software engineering and lived in England for 21/2 years before settling in Winston-Salem

Please see SEXTON, Page A7

Doshi and The "5" Royales are the only Winston-Salem artists to receive the award.

NC employment outlook remains stagnant as tariffs impact looms

RICHARD CRAVER Staff Reporter

The state's jobless rate remained stagnant at 3.7% for the 11th consecutive month during June even with another decline in the overall workforce, the N.C. Commerce Department reported Friday.

There was an overall 2,559 decrease in the labor force from May, representing 3,023 fewer employed North Carolinians and 464 more listed as newly unemployed and looking for work.

People who are not actively looking for work are not counted toward the unemployment rate.

That follows an overall 5,353 decrease from April to May.

Taking a year-over-year look, the state's labor force is essentially flat with an overall 950 decline. That represents a loss of 6,560 individuals listed as employed and an increase of 5,610 of those considered unemployed and looking for

Please see EMPLOYMENT, Page A7

Novant launches pancreatic cancer screening initiative

Program geared toward high-risk patients

RICHARD CRAVER Staff Reporter

Novant Health Inc. has introduced a new pancreatic cancer screening option for Triad patients in collaboration with Gastroenterology Associates of the Piedmont, P.A. and Digestive Health Specialists, P.A.

The aim is addressing the need for a

Triad multidisciplinary pancreatic cancer screening program for high-risk pa-

Eligible patients include those with a family history of pancreatic cancer or an increased risk based on genetic testing. Although the five-year survival rate for pancreatic cancer is just 13%, it improves significantly if the cancer is detected early while still confined to the pancreas.

Please see SCREENING, Page A7

Mike Speeney and Burt Myers trade barbs after a collision early in the first Modified race. SPORTS, B1

Weather P.M. thunderstorms High 90 • Low 73 FORECAST • A8

Inside
Advice	B4	Nation & World	Α
Comics	B5	Obituaries	A
Crossword	B5	Sports	В

Editorial