

SAVE BLENHEIM PALACE

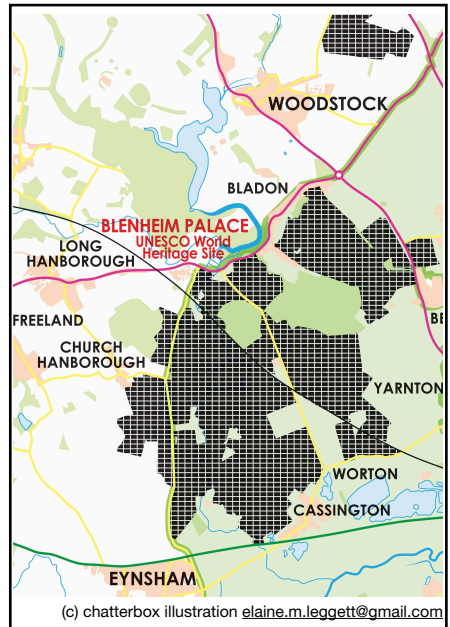

STOP BOTLEY WEST

If built, the proposed Botley West Solar Farm (BWSF) - at 3,400 acres one of the biggest in Europe - would reach within 100m of Blenheim Palace Park, ruining the setting of this historic site and threatening its UNESCO World Heritage Site status

The majority landowner of the BWSF proposed site is often just referred to as “Blenheim” but is actually a separate group of private companies and trusts owned by a small number of individuals NOT including “Blenheim Heritage Foundation Trust” which is the Charity responsible for the upkeep and safeguarding of the Palace itself.

The charity, and therefore the Palace, would not benefit financially from the solar farm at all but could be harmed by the possible loss of Blenheim Palace’s UNESCO World Heritage Site status and by allegations of links to Russian Money supporting developer PVDP and its dubious business practices.

It would be enormously helpful if you could find a moment to contact UNESCO and also your local MP to express your concerns for the future of “Britain’s Greatest Palace”

UNESCO: <https://unesco.org.uk/contact/> Start your message: FAO James Bridge
Your MP: Most use the address: 1stname.surname.mp@parliament.uk