Dave's Prayer

Dear Lord,

Help me to see that you are sovereign over the circumstances of my life, even over suffering that seems impossible to understand. Help me to see that suffering as a sacrament, something that can be a means of grace, drawing me closer to you, and you closer to me. Grant me the honesty to ask heartfelt questions. Grant me also the humility to realize that what I need isn't so much an answer but an embrace.

Embrace me, O God. Please. Lift me from the ash heap and gather me in your loving arms. Hold me close. Wipe my tears. And make me whole ... Eugene Peterson

My thoughts ...

I think it is about taking a pause and see that no matter what it is that's going on in our lives or around us, never forget we ultimately desire for God to hold us close in His Loving Arms.

May the grace of the Lord Jesus be with you.

My love to all of you in Christ Jesus.

On the journey with you,

Praise Out Cancer Inspires at Dorchester Seniors' Breast Cancer Awareness Workshops

Dorchester Seniors, Inc. recently welcomed Praise Out Cancer as guest speakers for cancer awareness workshops held at the St. George and Summerville centers. The sessions offered participants valuable education, encouragement, and motivation to take proactive steps in their personal health journeys.

FOUNDING MEMBER

Gracious God,

in this time of trial, we turn to You for healing and comfort. We entrust ourselves and our loved ones into Your loving hands, asking for Your powerful and miraculous touch to overcome this illness.

Fill us with Your hope and the strength to face each day with courage and faith, even in the midst of uncertainty. Grant us peace, knowing that You are with us and will never abandon us, shielding our hearts and minds.

May we see Your light guiding us through the darkest times and feel Your presence in our lives. Give us wisdom to know Your will, strength to fight, and love to live each day with gratitude for all the gifts we have received.

Help us to remember that You are bigger than any challenge and to trust in Your goodness and grace. If it is Your will, may this cancer be removed, and may we be restored to full health. If this is a cross we are called to bear, carry it with us, O Lord.

The Legacy Continues

Katherine (Katy) Ferguson (1772–1854), born enslaved in Virginia, became a free woman in New York City and founded the first documented Sunday School in America. Despite never learning to read or write, she memorized Scripture and began teaching 48 Black and white children in her home in 1793, later expanding with church support. Widowed young, she devoted her life to Bible teaching and prayer meetings for over 40 years.

CANCER 101

What Is Cancer?

Cancer affects 1 in 3 people in the United States. Chances are that you or someone you know has been affected by cancer. Here is some information to help you better understand what cancer is.

You are made up of trillions of cells that over your lifetime normally grow and divide as needed. When cells are abnormal or get old, they usually die. Cancer starts when something goes wrong in this process and your cells keep making new cells and the old or abnormal ones don't die when they should. As the cancer cells grow out of control, they can crowd out normal cells. This makes it hard for your body to work the way it should.

For many people, cancer can be treated successfully. In fact, more people than ever before are leading full lives after cancer treatment.

Cancer is more than just one disease

There are many types of cancer. Cancer can develop anywhere in the body and is named for the part of the body where it started. For instance, breast cancer that starts in the breast is still called breast cancer even if it spreads (metastasizes) to other parts of the body.

There are two main categories of cancer:

- Hematologic (blood) cancers are cancers of the blood cells, including leukemia, lymphoma, and multiple myeloma.
- Solid tumor cancers are cancers of any of the other body organs or tissues. The most common solid tumors are breast, prostate, lung, and colorectal cancers.

These cancers are alike in some ways, but can be different in the ways they grow, spread, and respond to treatment. Some cancers grow and spread fast. Others grow more slowly. Some are more likely to spread to other parts of the body. Others tend to stay where they started.

Some types of cancer are best treated with surgery; others respond better to drugs such as chemotherapy. Often 2 or more treatments are used to get the best results.

What is a tumor?

A tumor is a lump or growth that can be benign or malignant (cancer).

What is the difference between a benign and a malignant tumor?

Benign tumors usually grow slowly, don't grow into tissues around them, and don't grow into other parts of the body. They also don't often cause symptoms unless they grow large enough to push on other structures. If they need treatment, it is usually surgery although radiation and medications can also be used. Benign tumors are not cancer.

Malignant tumors (cancer) can grow quickly and uncontrollably. These tumors can grow and spread into areas close by. Cells from these tumors can break away, travel through blood or lymph system, and begin to grow in other parts of the body. When this happens it is called metastasis. Symptoms from malignant tumors usually vary depending on where the tumor is located. Malignant tumors are treated with surgery, radiation, and drugs such as chemotherapy.

What causes cancer?

Cancer cells develop because of multiple changes in their genes. These changes can have many possible causes. Lifestyle habits, genes you get from your parents, and being exposed to cancer-causing agents in the environment can all play a role. Many times, there is no obvious cause.

What is the cancer stage?

When a cancer is found, tests are done to see how big the cancer is and whether it has spread from where it started. This is called the cancer's stage.

A lower stage (stage 1 or 2) means that the cancer has not spread very much. A higher number (stage 3 or 4) means it has spread more. Stage 4 is the highest stage.

The stage of the cancer is very important in choosing the best treatment for a person. Ask your doctor about your cancer's stage and what it means for you.

How does cancer spread?

Cancer can spread from where it started to other parts of the body.

When cancer cells break away from a tumor, they can travel to other areas of the body through either the bloodstream or the lymph system. Most of these escaped cancer cells die or are killed before they can start growing somewhere else. But one or two might settle in a new area, begin to grow, and form new tumors. This spread of cancer to a new part of the body is called metastasis.

Cancer and African American People

Key Points

- Compared to members of other racial and ethnic groups, Black and African American people have higher rates of getting and dying from many kinds of cancer.
- However, many cancers can be prevented.

Overview

Compared to members of other racial and ethnic groups, Black and African American people have higher rates of getting and dying from many kinds of cancer.

- Black people have the highest death rate for cancer overall.
- Black people have a lower overall 5-year cancer survival rate than White people.
- Black people are more likely than White people to be diagnosed with female breast, lung, and colorectal cancers at a late stage. Cancer is harder to treat after it spreads from the place where it started to other parts of the body.

Many cancers can be prevented. Staying away from tobacco smoke, keeping a healthy weight, drinking little or no alcohol, and getting human papillomavirus (HPV) vaccinations on time can lower the risk of getting cancer. Screening tests can prevent some cancers or find them early, when treatment works best. Some of these risk factors vary by race and ethnicity.

- More Black men than White men say they smoke cigarettes now.
- Non-Hispanic Black Americans are more likely than other groups to be exposed to smoke from other people's cigarettes, called secondhand smoke.
- Obesity is most prevalent among non-Hispanic Black adults.
- Overall, non-Hispanic Black adults are less likely than non-Hispanic White adults to be vaccinated against HPV. HPV vaccines help prevent several kinds of cancer.
- Non-Hispanic Black adults are less likely than non-Hispanic White adults to engage in heavy drinking.
- Black people are more likely than White people to be up to date on screening tests for colorectal, breast, and cervical cancer.

How to lower your risk

You can take steps to lower your risk of getting cancer.

Prostate cancer

Black men are more likely to get prostate cancer than men who are members of other racial or ethnic groups. They are more than twice as likely to die from prostate cancer than other men. Learn about the possible benefits and harms of prostate cancer screening. Then talk to your doctor about your risk and decide if screening is right for you.

Breast cancer

Overall, White women are more likely to get breast cancer than Black women, but Black women are more likely die from the disease. Breast cancer is often diagnosed at later stages and is more aggressive in African American women than in White women. Know how your breasts normally look and feel. Talk to your doctor if you see changes.

Lung cancer

Black men have the highest rates of developing and dying from lung cancer. If you smoke, try to quit, and stay away from other people's cigarette smoke. If you're 50 to 80 years old and smoke now or quit in the last 15 years, lung cancer screening may be right for you.

Cervical cancer

Black women are more likely to die from cervical cancer than White women in the United States. If you're 26 years old or younger, make sure you're vaccinated against HPV. HPV causes almost all cervical cancers. If you're 21 to 65 years old, get screened for regularly.

What CDC is doing

CDC helps all people lower their cancer risk and get the right screening tests at the right time. CDC works with communities to find the best ways to prevent and control cancer and put these practices into action.

- Face Your Health is an educational outreach program that encourages African American women to get screened for cervical cancer.
- CDC awarded funds to the nonprofit organization Cicatelli Associates, Inc. as part of a project to understand what works to advance health equity in cancer. The organization will examine Project BAT (Black people Against Tobacco), which works to help Black people in Mississippi quit using tobacco.
