

RURAL ENERGY ALLIANCE

ADVOCATING FOR PRIVATE PROPERTY RIGHTS AT THE INTERSECTION OF AGRICULTURE AND ENERGY DEVELOPMENT

Operating across America, the Rural Energy Alliance was established to defend the rights of landowners and bring their voice to energy development.

REA members are devoted to being good stewards of the land.

REA members believe that good stewardship of the land is made possible by creating economic opportunities for rural communities. The REA seeks to foster these opportunities while ensuring the protection of landowner's property right and individual liberties.

Landowners should be able to fully develop and profit from their land.

Our membership is composed of landowners around the country who support energy development, whether in oil and gas production, alternative fuels, or utility-scale clean energy projects such as wind, solar, and energy storage.

The Rural Energy Alliance advocates for the property rights of landowners.

REA believes landowners –not governments– care most about their properties, and they should be entitled the benefits their land can provide, including hosting transmission, pipeline and energy projects projects alongside agricultural uses.

JOIN THE MOVEMENT

FOLLOW THE REA

Visit the REA on social media for updates, news, and engagement opportunities.

Facebook: @RuralEnergyUSA

Twitter: @RuralEnergyUSA

Instagram: @RuralEnergyUSA

CONTACT THE REA

Contact the REA by email at Contact@RuralEnergyAlliance.org to become a member and support landowners in your community.

LEARN MORE

Visit RuralEnergyAlliance.org for more information and to find news from across the country regarding agriculture, energy and landowner rights.

RuralEnergyAlliance.org
Contact@RuralEnergyAlliance.org