Writing

This week we will be focusing on writing our information essay.

We have been doing some research in class and this week we will decide the 3 subtopics and write out our essay planner. You will also pick a partner to work with. This will also help you because you will be doing research and you will have a partner to help you. Hooray! The website has more info and my essay example.

Math FYI

We will touching on some end of the year concepts like area and perimeter, making plot lines, measuring angles etc. The CAASPP test usually asks questions from the end of the book so we want to be prepared. I will try to give lots of class time for this.

No Spelling Words

Book Clubs

Taking a break this week again.

Got Rocks?

This is our LAST week to collect rocks! Two rocks are due by Monday. You can always collect more of course. (I will add extra credit points.)

This week we will be identifying sedimentary rocks!

CAASPP Test

We will be taking the CAASPP test NEXT WEEK on Monday through Wednesday in the mornings.

FYI, the test is untimed; however, most students will be finished each day by 11:00. Your child will be given extra supervised time if needed in another setting (not room 10).

Everyone needs to have their earphones at school. Sometimes they accidentally get left at home so please make sure they are at school or in your backpack.

Getting familiar with how to navigate on the website can make a difference in performance. To help with this, you may do an on-line practice test at home using this link: <https://www.caaspp.org/practice-and-training/index.html>

Choose "Practice and Training Tests for Students" and sign in as a guest. No user ID or password will be required. You will be directed to choose the correct grade level.

This is not required, but I am reducing homework in order to provide more time at home to do this. Knowing what to expect will definitely be a stress reducer!
