A BRIEF HISTORY OF HYPNOSIS

The use of hypnosis for healing purposes can be traced back thousands of years. More than 4,000 years ago, ancient Egyptians attended the temple of Imhotep, where they would engage in healing rituals involving a trance-like state.

German physician Franz Mesmer (1734-1815) suggested that humans are affected by 'magnetic tides' in a similar way to the forces which affect planets. Mesmer used magnets with Francisca Österlin, a patient suffering from hysteria. He claimed that his newfound techniques had helped the patient. However, it is believed that it was in fact Mesmer's use of hypnotic suggestions which had brought about changes in his patient. Today, the term mesmerism is synonymous with hypnosis.

In 1845, surgeon James Esdaile traveled to India and gained respect for his successful use of hypnosis. He reduced mortality rates in surgery from around 50 percent to just 8 percent, and his patients recovered more quickly and easily than the average surgical cases of his day.

By 1847, James Braid discovered that all the major phenomena of hypnotism, such as catalepsy, anesthesia and amnesia, could be induced without sleep. Realizing that his choice of the term hypnosis had been a mistake, he tried to rename it monoideism, but it was too late: hypnosis and hypnotism had already gained widespread use.

Today, hypnotherapy is used in many diverse areas including conventional medicine, counseling, dentistry, psychology, sports psychology, personal development, and in business.

Popular portrayals of hypnosis, as well as stage hypnosis as a form of entertainment, may lead you to imagine swinging watches, spinning spirals and on-stage antics when you think of 'hypnosis'. But the therapeutic application of hypnosis - hypnotherapy - is considerably different from these preconceptions.

What is hypnosis? Hypnosis is a state of altered awareness during which our subconscious mind is more open and receptive to suggestions that are given. We drift in and out of different levels of awareness many times each day, absorbing information on a subliminal level as well as a conscious one. A hypnotherapist will work with a client's imagination to help them to achieve their goals, such as overcoming habits and phobias, or losing weight.

Can anyone be hypnotized? All hypnosis is in essence, self-hypnosis, and few people are incapable of being hypnotized. Therefore, most people can benefit in some way from hypnosis provided they are guided by an experienced individual who understands the way in which the subconscious mind functions. A thorough understanding of the developing mind and therapeutic approaches is essential for hypnotherapists, as dealing with personal problems is a great responsibility.

From one of my many students;

My name is Amy Arvary and in 2009 the universe led me right to Scott Lea where the direction of my whole life changed. I sat in my car for about an hour before I walked into the introduction to Hypnosis class I signed up for wondering what the hell was I thinking... then I went in and everything changed.

Scott Lea is an excellent teacher. He is non-judgmental, thoughtful, helpful, and honestly excited about the information he teaches. Until the day we met I never imagined my life would have taken the direction it did. He is responsible for a lot of that.

Since that first day, I have gone from certified hypnotist, to certified hypnotherapist to certified master hypnotherapist. I have used hypnotherapy in many different arenas such as surgery, middle schools, colleges and in private practice. I have helped people from ages 4 to 87 and it is because of that one day that I allowed myself to break out of the boundaries I was once held by and took his class.

I HIGHLY recommend taking Scott's class if you have a desire to break out of the box that is holding you back. The information you will learn will change how you think and the way Scott delivers it will make you glad you did.
