THE EMERGENCE OF SCAR CARE: BEAUTY'S NEXT MAJOR CATEGORY

Silicone is also the hero ingredient in Motivo Scar Care's lineup. Transgender entrepreneur Jadis Montijo created the brand with the help of Jonathan Keith, MD, one of the leading gender-affirming plastic surgeons in the US. Dr. Keith performed Montijo's top surgery and suggested scar tape to help reduce the appearance of scars. Montijo found that the scar tape didn't match his skin tone and was constantly falling off, which made him less inclined to use it. Montijo ended up going under the knife a second time for a scar revision procedure to remove the stubborn scarring and was told again to use scar care treatments to help with the healing process. Motivo Scar Care offers inclusive and effective products designed to help consumers discreetly improve the appearance of scars resulting from cuts, burns, surgical procedures, traumatic injuries, or acne.

"After my surgery, having spent time and money trying to become this person that I've always wanted to be, it definitely created a bigger emphasis around wanting not to see scars that remind me of who I used to be," Montijo tells BeautyMatter. "Many people who have scars have them for reasons they don't want. I think the increase in the appearance-conscious market is driving people to care more about their scars now."

Montijo believes consumers who have a skincare routine should also have a scar care routine—if they have scars they want to get rid of. The two categories are related, but they are not the same.

"There's definitely a difference between caring for your skin and caring for your scar," says Montijo. "Just because you apply lotion and moisturizers to care for your skin doesn't mean they'll be effective in healing your scar."

Motivo Scar Care is currently available on Amazon, in Dr. Keith's office, and on its own DTC site. Montijo hopes to introduce the brand to retail soon but doesn't want to be in the first aid aisle. He views Motivo Scar Care as a beauty brand rather than a medical device or product brand.

"I am intentionally trying to combine scar care with skincare and beauty because it goes hand in hand," he says. "[Scarring] is something that could potentially create a dysphoria around someone's image, which goes along with how they internalize their beauty. The beauty industry should absolutely embrace that."

11 Best Curl Creams for Defined Waves, Curls and Coils

✓ Hair texture: Before you buy a new curl cream, determine whether your hair is fine, medium or coarse. "Always seek guidance from your salon professional to help determine the hair type," says Gina Rivera, Celebrity Hairstylist and Founder of Phenix Salon Suites. However, to quickly determine your hair's texture, consider proceeding with an at-home strand test. Take an individual strand of hair between your fingers. If you can hardly feel it, you likely have fine hair. If your hair typically holds a style well and you can feel it upon doing the strand test, then it's likely medium or coarse. Coarse hair can typically hold a curl well, but can often be difficult to style due to its density. If it feels thick and strong when doing the strand test, your hair is likely coarse.

On the flip side, you could choose lowlights. But instead of adding a shade that's slightly darker (which is normally what you'd do with lowlights), try to match your non-gray hair color. This will help blend without adding a brand-new shade to the mix. "Lowlights create some contrast and will give hair a more salt-and-pepper look that can be very becoming," says celebrity hairstylist Gina Rivera, founder of Phenix Salon Suites in Encinitas, California. Just be sure not to go darker than your hair color, says Rivera. Doing so can create too much contrast and bring more attention to the fact that you are transitioning to gray, which won't look good in photos or in real life.

13 Best Scalp Oils to Nourish at the Roots

Yates says that scalp oiling has its benefits—as well as its limits. “Massaging the scalp helps alleviate tightness, and will help promote optimal scalp health,” she says. “Good scalp health leads to proper follicle fitness, which is ideal for maintaining gorgeous hair.” However, she says, “Consumers tend to overuse hair oiling, thinking if a little is good, a lot is better. This thinking will lead to clogged follicles, which can lead to hair loss if it’s prolonged.” In general, Yates recommends oiling the scalp once a week at the most; she says that less frequent, monthly treatments can also benefit hair health.

Oil vs. Serum: The Best Formula for Hair Growth, According to Experts

Formulation is key with any product you put in your hair, especially for growth. Since over-the-counter products are not medicated, it's helpful to understand the ingredients targeted for hair growth and how they work. With liquid or water-based formulas, serums and tonics can be absorbed into the scalp. "These products should be applied on the scalp for the most effective results," says Kerry E Yates, trichologist and founder of Colour Collective. She explains that applying a serum directly to the problem area can help establish a healthy scalp, which in turn, supports follicle health.

This Under-the-Radar Firming Cream on Amazon Is the Secret to Looking Toned This Summer

As a beauty writer with nearly a decade of experience, I've come to the realization that while the U.S. has put skincare on a pedestal, body care has long been overlooked. Surprisingly, that's not the case with many other countries. Take Brazil, for example: The latin country puts a major emphasis on body care, and along with slathering on rich lotions, it's not uncommon for people to go the extra mile and perform daily, lymphatic drainage massages. The tides are finally shifting, though, and some of these body care practices are finally coming stateside with the help of products like the Voesh Tone'd Body Firming Roller Creme.

This nourishing cream not only smoothes and softens skin — its unique applicator boosts circulation and encourages lymphatic drainage, making it easier than ever to treat yourself and achieve body sculpting benefits from home. Rather than smoothing a dollop onto your skin with your hands, this dispenses the perfect amount of lotion which you then work in with the attached massagers.

It often takes the help of a specialist to determine why your hair is thinning. Jodi LoGerfo, DNP, APRN, a doctor of nursing practice and nurse practitioner who specializes in dermatology, says there are autoimmune diseases, hormone imbalances, and nutritional deficiencies that can contribute to the problem, and many people are dealing with more than one of those concerns at a time. She also says that female-pattern hair thinning (androgenetic alopecia) is more common than many realize, affecting an estimated 40 percent of women by age 50. "Women typically may start to notice changes at 40, 50, but it's insidious and happens over months to years," LoGerfo says.

The Essential Updates for Your Hair-Care Routine Once You Go Gray

“As a minimum, you need a hair routine that is focused on hydrating and moisture balance,” says Yates. “Gray hair can be drier and more fragile, so a moisturizing formula is key,” agrees Musleh. Hairstylist Raven Hurtado says “using a moisturizing shampoo and conditioner to hydrate and soften the hair since gray hair can feel wiry and dry” is essential.

Ones to try: Privé Moisture Rich Shampoo ($28) + Conditioner ($30), Kerastase Blond Absolu
Lumière Illuminating Shampoo ($46) + Cicaflash Conditioner ($25)

A healthy scalp is the key to hitting your hair goals. Here's a complete guide to scalp care, according to experts

Yates singles out the Privé Moisture Rich Shampoo for its hydrating formula. It's made with highly penetrative ingredients like jojoba proteins and kukui oil, which help add moisture. It also features green tea leaves to soften hair.

After working her way up in the hair care world, Hoelscher started Privé because she knew the hair world could be better and do better. Her mission is to use business as a force for good, creating small batch, artisan products that are salon-worthy at more accessible prices while giving back.

Save yourself a step with this body wash that simultaneously exfoliates and cleanses. Pure sugar crystals and AHAs sourced from plants work to slough off skin, while natural botanical oils soothe and hydrate. It comes in four scents: Black Tea & Rose, Neroli & Patchouli, Hinoki & Lavanda and Fig & Amber. $19, voesh.com

6 Essential Products For Younger-Looking Hands

For times when you want to practice self-care and give your hands a noticeable boost, these ultra-hydrating gloves can transform dry, cracking hands fast, all while you're catching up on emails. "Hand moisturizers are great day-to-day to improve the appearance of fine lines and crepey skin," says Wolinsky. Voesh's disposable gloves are infused with argan oil, vegan collagen and floral extracts, which help improve skin elasticity and firmness, moisturize and give a hydrated glow. I like that these make the thinner-looking skin on the back of my hands appear supple and more youthful after wearing them for just 10 to 15 minutes. There's no need to rinse hands after use, and while these do have a light floral scent, it's not off-putting.

8 Best Foot Peeling Masks for Sandal-Ready Feet

When you decide to do a foot mask, you really have to commit to an hour (or more) off your feet because it's nearly impossible to move around in plastic booties. These comfy socks aren't like others, though. The extra soft masks wrap tightly around your ankles and feel ultra plush, and Glamour commerce writer Alanna Martine Kilkeary was able to get things done around the house while wearing them. “I wore these on a Sunday afternoon while cleaning my apartment (they slid right into my slippers without any issues), and they were comfortable and refreshing the whole time. After removal, my feet were soft to the touch and felt extremely hydrated and crack-free.”

BEST SCENTED SHOWER FILTER

VOESH Vitamin C Shower Filter

Upgrading your shower experience is as easy as screwing one of these capsules to your showerhead. What's inside: vitamin C to remove chlorine, vegan probiotics to bolster your skin barrier, oatmeal powder to soothe itchiness, and a spa-like fragrance. You'll want to replace the filter every three months, and you can always change up the scent when you do; there are five options. "This was so easy to install and it transformed my shower into a spa," says Anthony.

28 of the Best Menopause Products to Get You Through Hot Flashes

These knee-high cooling therapy socks are infused with tea tree, mint and cica leaf extracts, giving instant relief to tired legs and feet. Whether you're going through some hard hot flashes or just finished leg day at the gym, these are perfect for your every cooling need.

The Coolest New Body Care for Sweltering Summer Days Ahead

Feet often need extra TLC, especially during sandal season. That's where this stick comes in. The waterless balm steps up your foot-care regimen with squalane plus a trio of oils (jojoba, macadamia and organic virgin olive) to moisturize soles and leave them unbelievably soft.

Collagen Manicures Are Trending, But Can They Actually Help Nail Growth?

“One of my favorite products to use during manicure prep is collagen-infused pre-soaked gloves,” says Streets, referring to Caci’s Rejuvenating Hand Mask, which contains hydrolyzed collagen, hydrating hyaluronic acid, and deeply moisturizing shea butter to soften the skin. Dry, cracked heels? These expert-loved foot creams offer softness and hydration

Applying foot cream can sometimes be messy, but this stick cream from Voesh takes away the clean-up. Plus, the formula is just as effective, too, suggests editor Vivien Moon, who has already seen results after a few uses. "I am on my feet all day and get 10,000 steps on average so they go through a lot," she says. Moon adds that the formula "isn't greasy" and has "been a lovely addition to my nighttime routine."
