Dear Brothers and Sisters in Christ at Faith Lutheran Church,

“We’ll see you next time!” If you’re like me, you have the privilege of hearing that phrase multiple times a week as you check out from your local Kwik Trip. It doesn’t matter which one you stop at or why you are there, if you make it inside the store, an employee, with a smile on their face, will end your interaction with that welcome to return.

From a customer service perspective, the phrase is an incredible example of thorough employee training. To have every employee end every interaction with that same phrase does not happen by accident. It is intentional, purposeful, and designed to convey the company’s desire for you to return. And return I do.

There are times, however, when the phrase almost seems like a taunt. More of a “You’ll be back!” than a “be sure to chose us again the next time you need to make a quick trip to the store.” And while it is not intended to be a taunt (I don’t think anyway), it does display their confidence that you will return because they have provided a superior experience, service, or product that will have you coming back again soon.

When I started thinking about this phrase, I wondered, what would the church’s version of this greeting be? At first, I was thinking about the benediction which sends us on our way with God’s blessing. It happens at the end of the service, its consistent, and it is used by churches throughout history and of all different denominations. But, as beautiful as the benediction is, it does not have the same expectation that you will be back. So, I had to think more creatively.

Ultimately, I think the church’s version of the Kwik Trip farewell is the confession of sins and the absolution. Like the farewell, it is not a taunt of we know you will return, it is a confident statement that observes what we know to be true in the world. Just like you need what Kwik Trip sells, you need the forgiveness of sins. Each time your sins are forgiven, you have received what you needed, and you are sustained for a time. However, as certain as you are to run out of milk, bread, bananas, or gas, you are even more certain to sin in thought, word, or deed. And when that happens, there is only one place that you can turn to have it dealt with, the Word of God spoken to the people of God. So, you come, week after week, and kneel before our Lord’s altar so that you can bear your sins before him and hear his precious words spoken again and again, “I forgive you all your sins.”

If you look around, you know that those around you will be back next week as well. What a wonderful gift we have been given to know that God is intentional, purposeful and has designed the words spoken to his children to convey his desire to return to him. It is a privilege to know that our God speaks his words out of Fatherly love for his children. It is a privilege to know that he does truly desire to “see you next time.”

Pastor

Whatever form your Christmas traditions take, it is likely that music plays some role in defining the holidays for you. With the advent (pun intended) of streaming music services and other handy digital sources it is possible for us to get just the right amount of holiday music at just the right time to suit our taste (We may never need the song “We Need a Little Christmas, Right This Very Minute” ever again). Over time things change ever so gradually. Perhaps you discover a new holiday song that captures your imagination and gently crowds out one of your favorites from years past. Or maybe the way you spend your holidays has changed. Families change – we all grow a little older, we move closer together or farther apart, new family members and friends are added, and sadly some of those we used to celebrate with are no longer with us.

The comfort we have as Christians is that the Word of God does not change, and the whole reason for the celebration of Christ’s birth has not changed. We hear it as the Gospel reading on Christmas Day from John 1 “In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and Word was God. He was with God in the beginning.” Change is sometimes hard for us to tolerate because we are looking to be grounded in the things around us instead of the things that are eternal. Hard as it may be to believe, the over-the-top types of festivities we now associate with the Christmas season have evolved mostly over the last 200 years. In the relatively short span of our lives we assume that Christmas has always been much the same, when in fact it has not.

Why dwell on all this? It is because the patterns of worship here at Faith have changed over the years, and with it some of the music heard during the services. I remember the first year I served here at Faith there were more than a few people that were unhappy because the hymns that were used were not exactly the same as they had been for decades past – I had ruined the Christmas celebration! It was not that the Christmas carols we sang were unusual or strange; they weren’t. What I discerned later was that there was a lot of change happening within the congregation at that time which made people uneasy, and that the easiest thing to identify as an unnecessary and irksome change was the music at Christmas. Fortunately we’ve all grown together over these many years and opened ourselves up to keeping many valued traditions like “Little Children Can You Tell” and the candle-lighting to “Silent Night” as well as using a variety of different Christmas hymns.

For this year’s Christmas celebration, the adult choir will be singing at the 1:00 pm service which has been steadily growing in attendance. As in years past the children’s choirs will be featured at the 4:30 pm service. There will not be a full half-hour of pre-service music before the 7:00 service. Instead the handbells will play throughout this beautiful evening service. The final, quieter candle-light service takes place at 10:00 pm. And, I would encourage you to return for the 10:00 am service on Christmas Day, which is a joyful continuation of the celebration with different carols and a different Christmas sermon from our vicar. All of these services are full divine services with communion and there will be more pre-service music than usual. May you be richly blessed by the celebration of our Lord’s birth this year!
