TOWN MEETS COUNTRY

JASON ZASKY

"For the past five or six years, the town had talked about building a new town hall," begins Micah Wood, Thompson's Station's Interim Town Administrator and Town Planner. Fast forward to summer 2024, and Thompson's Station has its long-awaited new home base, conveniently located just off U.S. Highway 31.

"We moved in just after New Year's Day; that's when we started having meetings in our new boardroom. And we had our open house on May 14," adds Wood, who first worked for Thompson's Station in the early 2000s and returned four years ago to help guide the community into its increasingly bright future. But as recently as last year, Wood and his colleagues were laboring under less-than-ideal work conditions in one of two different buildings. And even then, there wasn't enough space to do all the work that needed to be done.

In fact, when Wood and four of his colleagues worked in the old post office building, they typically had to step out onto the stoop to meet with property owners, business owners, and members of the public because there wasn't enough space or privacy to meet with them inside.

"We had no individual offices and no good place to have meetings with members of the public. And all of our board meetings had to be held in the Community Center, on folding tables and folding chairs," he notes.

Today, Wood and the staff labor in a much more welcoming and presentable environment.

"With the upgraded meeting space, we can welcome people in and talk to them in a more comfortable space,” elaborates Wood, who says his favorite thing about the new town hall is the boardroom.

“One of the biggest benefits is having a purpose-built boardroom. It functions better, you can hear better, and it’s more comfortable for the board members, commissioners, and for the audience, so no one is sitting on folding chairs for a three-hour meeting,” he says.

More than that, the building—which offers more than 7,000 square feet of space—very much matches the community’s personality, having originally been built to serve as an auction barn before being converted. Wood highlights the rocking chairs and floral arrangements that decorate the wraparound porch, both of which contribute to the pleasant, Thompson’s Station-like vibe of the building.

“It’s been a very positive change for the town staff, and also for board members, commissioners and members of the public,” he says, so much so that the town is poised to make the facility its permanent home.

“Originally, we planned to lease this space for four or five years while we planned for a brand-new town hall, but it’s worked out so well, and it’s such a nice building that it would be a shame to turn around and move to another one we’d have to build from scratch. We have been working with the board to go ahead and purchase this building so we can stay here for the long haul,” notes Wood, who insists he enjoys working for the town more than ever before.

“When you have a workplace that accommodates doing your work, it makes it a lot easier to get things done,” he notes. That is one reason he and his colleagues encourage local residents to come by and see what makes the new town hall such a valuable addition to the community.

“We tell people our doors are open. If you missed our open house and want to swing by for a tour or sit on our rocking chairs, our doors are open for that,” he concludes. “We are making the new town hall more of a community building, as opposed to just a building that people will occasionally show up to for a meeting.”

Better yet, the new town hall is well positioned to accommodate an increase in the size of the staff, thanks to purpose-built rooms that can be subdivided further. In fact, the town is already looking to add a few new employees. For his part, Wood believes the positions ought to be very attractive to potential candidates, in part because Thompson’s Station is such a compelling place to live and work.

“It’s a great small town, it’s scenically beautiful, and it has great neighborhoods,” he concludes. “Plus, we have great board members and commissioners who are really civic-minded. It’s a fun place to work.”

TICKETS ON SALE NOW FOR EVENT AT THE BARN AT SYCAMORE FARMS

Tickets are now available for the sixth annual Friends of Williamson County Animal Center (FOWCAC)

"An Evening with Friends" fundraiser on Thursday, July 18, at Sycamore Farms in Arrington. Event programming begins at 6:00 p.m. and includes dinner and beverages and live and silent auction items. In addition, FOWCAC President, Edie Lynn Hoback is encouraging attendees to dress in their finest animal-themed attire and accessories. All proceeds directly benefit the animals and programs at Williamson County Animal Center (WCAC) as well as an immeasurable number of other middle Tennesseans and their pets, according to Hoback.

"We have accomplished so much over the years with the help of our neighbors," she said. "Thanks to Mars Petcare, all of our supporting partners, and the dedication of so many others, our local shelter is a model resource for families and exemplifies what it means to be part of a responsible, pet-friendly community."

Those who wish can buy tickets online by visiting FOWCAC's website: www.friendsofwcac.org. Anyone unable to attend can contribute by making a donation in honor of the event on the site as well.

FOWCAC is a 501(c)(3) organization dedicated to improving the lives of all animals in Williamson County.

WCAC is located at 1006 Grigsby Hayes Court in Franklin, near Franklin Christian Academy. The center is open to the public Monday through Friday, 10:00 a.m. until 6:00 p.m.; Saturday, 11:00 a.m. until 3:00p.m.; closed Sunday. Times may vary due to holidays.
