

Think Murder, She Wrote meets The Dead Files on a whale-watch boat. A centuries-old whaling feud explodes into present-day murder, and the clues hide in antique logbooks, stolen artifacts, and whispers from the other side.

THE STORY BEHIND THE STORY

"The concept for Whisper in the Waves: Murder in Plymouth Harbor blossomed from research into my own family's whaling history in the area combined with the love of mystery and intrigue that has surrounded Plymouth MA since the 1600's. Blending past and present with fact and fiction, the story developed by linking the 1800's whaling era with a modern-day murder, involving a current generation of whale watchers. Fascination with the ocean, history, and cryptic family clues provided the perfect ingredients to weave a local nautical mystery with characters linked by ancestors and their secrets."

—Author Dianne Hunt Smith

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Dianne Hunt Smith is a life-long beach lover who currently lives on the South Shore of Massachusetts. After a career in the printing and book publishing industry and many years at a dog obedience school, she is now retired. Golfing, gardening, and spending time with her two dogs and husband are her favorite pastimes. Her love for books and writing since childhood has evolved into publishing her first mystery series with more to follow — stay tuned for the third book in the Eye in the Sky series!

