I started BaristaCats Café with my own saving's and investment's and have continued to stuff away tips from bartending here and there, purchasing small things for the café as I see them or if something is on sale. It's important for me to stay clear of deficits, loans, and things that will take away from the cats. If it means it takes longer to open, so be it. But this also means, the café will heavily depend on donations to help with different costs. From food for the cats, cleaning, and every day expenses. I've made a list of ways you can help us if your interested. From direct donations, our Amazon wishlist, to our GoFundMe.
