SUMMER UNIVERSITY ON EUROPEAN CITIZENSHIP

Towards the next European elections

European citizenship writ large

When? Thursday 6 September-Friday 7 September 2018

Where? Committee of the Regions
Rue Belliard 99-101
B - 1040 Brussels

THE EVENT:

This is not the usual European conference: there will be real content and more time for cross fertilisation of ideas among over 120 participants: civil society representatives, academics and policy makers from the EU Institutions. EU citizenship like any other can be writ large if its scattered components of rights, involvement and trust are brought together and made more visible. They stand or fall together. Our guidelines illustrate this approach.

The summer university will be devoted to each of these three aspects of any true citizenship starting in the morning of 6 September with partner meetings, providing you with a wide choice of events to attend. This will be followed on each day by debate with panels from civil society, academia and the EU Institutions.

At the end of the Summer University, participants will meet in round tables to thrash out a road map of ideas and actions for European citizenship writ large with the immediate deadline being the May 2019 elections to the European Parliament.

This third edition of the Summer University is more ambitious, as the title suggests, reflecting the report of last year's event – which can be found here and which is rich in contents and proposals. ECIT and its partner organisations are setting out to achieve a ground-breaking event in the run-up to the next European elections in May 2019. Our aim is to shift the emphasis away from the endless debate about the rise of populism, nationalism and the barriers to Europe. We propose that the Summer University should assert European citizenship - the first transnational citizenship of the modern era - as the answer: a deliberately positive, utopian approach.

With:

In 2017 the Summer University was organised with 14 partners¹. Some are likely to participate again and new partners will be invited to join the Summer University including ALDA (Association of Local Democracy Agencies) with its WISE Project and Immigration Law Associates.

ECIT is also examining the possibility of encouraging parallel events in other countries. An event on the impact on European rights of a country withdrawing from the EU could be held in the UK, whilst another on attitudes to European citizenship in countries which have applied to join the EU could be held in the Western Balkans. These are planned for later in 2018 or at the beginning of 2019.

About the programme:

The programme meets two objectives. On the one hand, the ECIT Board considers that continuity is necessary so that the basic design for the Summer University remains the same and a number of speakers are invited back. In this way, participants will be able to see whether progress is being made from one year to the next. On the other hand, the programme should reflect new proposals, research and policy developments.

The run-up to the next European elections is the dominant factor. There is a clash between civil society groups on the one hand campaigning to make the elections more European with transnational lists and in other ways an opportunity for EU reform and the EU Institutions on the other adopting a far more cautious approach dampening down expectations. In the face of a new populism and Euroscepticism sweeping the continent, which side is right? For the Summer University, the Board of ECIT has drawn up a 10-point draft Manifesto for the European elections, which will form the basis of discussions. The text can be found here.

The technical facilities at the venue are excellent and there is space for stands and displaying publications. Please contact us if you are interested in taking advantage of the opportunity.

PLEASE NOTE: The majority of the speakers have confirmed, however the programme will still be modified as a result of input from partners and participants. It is not set in stone.

Please note that we have moved the event from the Maison des Associations Internationales to the Committee of the Regions (CoR).

Please register by filling in the attached form and book your FREE seat.
