Maryland State regulates all Assisted Living Programs (ALPs) according to the Maryland Reg. 10.07.14.

This includes requirements for the facility, for each resident's bedroom and for common areas. It also requires that managers successfully pass a required 80-hour training course, before the facility can apply for certification.

How much will it cost for a resident to live at the Nauvoo House Assisted Living Program?

The cost for a resident is anticipated to be comparable to other home Assisted Living Programs, about $4500 per month. This pays for food and supplies, meal preparation and the salaries of attendants and caregivers. The price depends on the level of care required by the resident.

If residents are paying to stay there, why is the Nauvoo House Foundation a non-profit organization?

At the rate mentioned above, it will take several residents to pay the salaries of staff and caregivers. Any profit after paying expenses will be kept within the foundation to be used for upgrading the facilities, such as adding more grab bars, railings, lifts, and similar amenities to make life easier for residents. Any leftover money can go toward purchasing the next facility in a different town.

Why a religiously-oriented Assisted Living Program?

We believe that elderly Latter-day Saints have unique needs – to be spiritually fed. We want to help them keep their covenants with God and Jesus Christ and to "stand in holy places". We want them to be surrounded by an uplifting, spiritual LDS atmosphere in which they feel comfortable continuing to wear their temple garments. As much as possible, we want them to continue their family history work and temple ordinance work.
