

Limits of Services and Assumption of Risks

Our psychotherapy relationship is entirely voluntary and you may decide to end it and/or consider alternative modes of treatment any time you wish. While it's expected that you will benefit from the therapy, individual responses vary and you might, at times, experience uncomfortable feelings which are risks of therapy. Should questions regarding the treatment arise during its course, the clinicians encourage you to discuss it with them.