Disclaimer:

Brianna King is not a licensed doctor, psychologist, psychiatrist or medical professional. She is a Holistic, Trauma-informed Counsellor. Brianna's years of lived experience, extensive study and independent research has given her experiential insight into the nature of trauma, addiction and mental health and what she does with her clients is based on professional, accredited training/study, independent study, and what she has found most helpful for herself and her clients.

Some of the techniques Brianna uses are considered alternative to that of the mainstream medical model; though alternative they are evidence-informed approaches and are backed by the latest neuroscientific research. She has found the techniques effective in assisting in the resolution or management of trauma, anxiety, depression, addiction and somatic stress.

Sessions with Brianna are not for the official diagnosis, prevention or cure of any condition or disease.

When speaking of "healing" Brianna is not referring to medical or physical conditions, but rather an experience where the traumatised parts of the psyche and body are given a chance to integrate and release, which assists in the regulation of the nervous system which can ease or resolve symptoms.

Brianna will not give advice, nor is trained to give advice around medication. Any decision around your medication needs to be made with your GP, psychiatrist or prescribing professional.

If you are suffering from Schizophrenia, BPD (borderline personality disorder), DID (dissociative identity disorder), or other forms of mental illness please note that sessions with Brianna are not equipped to treat these kinds of diagnosis and they should be treated by a medical professional. In these cases she has seen the information and techniques used to regulate the nervous system be helpful for those who are suffering with these diagnoses, though she does not work with these issues directly due to it being beyond her scope of practice.

Brianna does not make any promises of specific results. The techniques Brianna uses have in her own experience and in the observation of many of her clients' experience has brought about tangible and intangible benefits in their lives and assisted in the resolution of somatic stress, though there can be no guarantee of a specific outcome as each client responds differently.

Any life altering decision made from a client's interpretations of a discussion in session is a client's responsibility. If one is considering making a life altering decision based on a dialogue or insight that occurs in session, for example leaving one's partner or family, changing or coming off medication, leaving their job, trying psychedelic medicines or any other decision where there may be consequences, Brianna encourages every client to seek alternative opinions and support when making them.
