ETHOS

From a young age my mother projected her tainted idea of beauty and insecurities onto my sister and I, in an effort to protect us from the patriarchy lies of what women should be. During this process my sister and I become too aware of these lies. Inevitably we felt subjected to the male gaze, sexualized, and grew an unrealistic expectation of daily dressing.

Through my thesis I want to dissect my mother, our relationship, and the insecurities of dress and body that were formed. Breaking the cycle of generational shame with me.

Deconstructing the construction of women in domestic society and norms.

Deconstruct myself.
 Studying mother and daughter dynamics.
 Reading the psychology of this relationship,
 The Mother Wound Theory.
 Generational history and its effects in fashion.

Discovering my mother as a person, not just as my mother. Going through over 30,000 family photos, garment research.

What is The Mother Wound?

Mother's unintentionally project feelings of insecurities in an innocent effort to protect their daughters from potential rejection or shame (don't be too big, don't show your body...), when in reality it brings disowned pain onto them. Surfacing this insecurity to the daughters attention, making her too self-aware.

As you get older you realize your mother as a woman like you. A separate person. Outside of being your mom. She had a life, a beginning like you.

Mother → maternalistic → used for emotional comfort

grew from this looked @ labels
→ reject capitalism
and consumerism

Montauk, beach is the primary location.
Brooklyn Studio (possibly video some during the look book shoot for additional footage)

The scene is of the beach and manmade architecture.
The contrast of nature and manmade, representing the conflict of who I am and what I want to be. The beach is symbolizing where I am from and the connection, I make of it into my work.

In addition, cottage shots for transition of the storyline.
