Lujiazui Financial Area: A quick start in Shanghai's financial center to see iconic sites such as Pearl TV Tower and Shanghai World Financial Center while learning about modern Shanghai (Observation Decks are optional at 180RMB/person. Note: entrance fees are subject to change.)

Yuyuan Garden: This garden dates back to 1559 during the Ming Dynasty. A classic Chinese Garden rich in history, you'll see a wide range of halls, statues, rock structures, water features as well as the famous Grand Rockery and Exquisite Jade Rocks.

Old Shanghai: This area, not far from Yuyuan Garden, features traditional streets and homes that are quickly disappearing as Shanghai continues its push to modernity. You'll visit 100 year-old homes, remnants of the old city wall, bustling alleys, planned communities from the 1930's, unique architecture, stone artwork and so much more.

Jade Buddha Temple: The Jade Buddha Temple was founded in 1882 with two jade Buddha statues imported to Shanghai from Burma by sea. These were a sitting Buddha (1.95 meters tall, 3 tons), and a smaller reclining Buddha representing the Buddha's death. The temple now also contains a much larger reclining Buddha made of marble, donated from Singapore.

Yang's Fried Dumplings lunch: This local fried dumpling lunch will make you so satisfied. Normally you'll find out you are the only westerners in this very popular authentic restaurant.

Former French Concession Area: Enjoy the atmosphere of east meets west or one of the new popular places. This area is rich in the history of China when colonial powers had a significant presence in Shanghai. It has unique architecture while bustling with people along tree-lined streets.

The Bund: The Shanghai Bund has dozens of historical buildings, lining the Huangpu River, that once housed numerous banks, trading houses and consulates from all over Europe, Asia and the United States. The area highlights Shanghai's western influence in architecture and culture and today offers a beautiful walkway along the Huangpu River while learning about Shanghai's history.
