

Craftsmen worked from home - this is a potter, working outside his house. At night, he would take the wheel inside, along with his stock of clay.

If he works outside, people passing by can see what he does, and it may improve his trade.

This potter has a queue of people waiting to speak to him.

A carpenter, like Joseph was, might work outside his house, or he might have a workshop built on the side, especially if he often worked on large things, like carts and door frames - the wood would take up a lot of space in his house!

Look at the bench this carpenter is working at. Think about how much space it might take up in a house - look again at the pictures of the inside of a house.
