Welcome

‘Places Between Places’ is an inaugural exhibition by artists Lucie Smith and Amy Scott-Pillow. As a reflection on the evolution of their respective practices, they bring together new, re-contextualised and in-progress works that seek to interpret concepts surrounding death in its broadest sense.

Through shared and individual observations which consider interpreted histories, the dwelling as entity and rites of mourning, together they seek to explore the quiet traces of times past, offered within the tangible remains of the present.

Opening

“The stories of the past, and how we tell them, shape our world, for better or worse. stories are powerful, they crawl inside us and can be hard to shake.”

India Rakusen - Witch, BBC Radio 4

Lucie Smith and Amy Scott-Pillow invite you to immerse yourself in the evocative landscapes of memory and connection with their collaborative exhibition, “Places Between Places.” Delving into the realms of ancestral lineage, folk custom and personal narrative, they unveil a collection of artworks that transcend time, inviting viewers to explore the intricate threads that bind us to our past.

Using a diverse array of materials and mediums, including film, sculpture, 3D printing, and found objects, Smith and Scott-Pillow craft a multi-dimensional experience that weaves together fragments of memory and imagination to create a tapestry of shared experience and storytelling.

From intricately sculpted forms to hauntingly beautiful projections, “Places Between Places” offers a glimpse into the interconnectedness of past, present and future. Through their innovative use of contemporary technology and folk craft tradition, Smith and Scott-Pillow blur the boundaries between reality and fiction, inviting viewers to take a journey of discovery through the corridors of time.

At the heart of the exhibition lies an exploration of the human experience, where each artwork serves as a reflection of the artist’s personal journey and connection with their own history of family and place. Whether through the intricate details of a cast plaster sculpture or the serene imagery of the graveyard itself, Smith and Scott-Pillow invite viewers to find solace and inspiration in the stories of those who came before us.

Join us with nettle tea in hand as we embark on a voyage through memory, connection, and the places between places.

Lucie Smith

Lucie’s practice is rooted in an exploration of the cycles and relationships that characterise the human condition, with a particular focus on memory, empathy and storytelling. Within these interrogations lies a deep fascination with traces and the overlooked.

Through a compulsive process of collecting, reproducing and curating, she brings together symbols that characterise a narrative which are remembered, imagined, or fragmented.

Amy Scott-Pillow

Amy is a multidisciplinary artist exploring social connection and class dynamics. She has a particular interest in English heritage and historic custom. In past works she has found connection with members of her departed family by crafting echoes of their essence. Amy’s work invites contemplation on the intersections of history, memory, and the perpetual dance between the living and the departed.

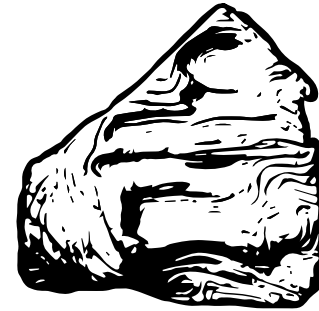

Close

“We are often more tender to the dead than to the living, though it is the living who need our tenderness most.”

Robert Macfarlane, Underland: A Deep Time Journey 2019
