National Data Center Educator's Day Set For August 1, 2020

A conference and networking event is planned at the U.S. National Whitewater Center in Charlotte, NC.

Dec. 4, 2019 (GREER, SC) American Advanced Technology & Cybersecurity University (AATC), along with Joint Force Solutions, has declared August 1, 2020, as National Data Center Educator's Day, which is designed to honor educators in the mission critical and data center industry. A concurrent conference and networking event will be held at the U.S. National Whitewater Center in Charlotte, NC, on July 31-August 1, 2020.

"National Data Center Educator's Day is a great way to give back to everyone who works to educate members in this fast-changing industry," said Dr. Tim Oergel, AATC Board Chair, Founder, and CEO. "The Joint Force Solutions 2020 Conference Event will feature keynote speakers, a panel discussion, an award ceremony, and, of course, rafting, zip lines, hiking, and biking, at the U.S. National Whitewater Center."

The Joint Force Solutions 2020 Conference Event is one of many initiatives planned for 2020 by AATC and Joint Force Solutions, which includes the construction of two data center conference centers, which will serve as meeting rooms, research and development centers, and community spaces as well as the formation of Joint Force Solutions Chapters to serve as networking organizations.

Advanced Technology and Cybersecurity (AATC) University is a member of the consortium of Network Alliances known as Joint Force Solutions™. This consortium is comprised of a Joint Conferencing Networking Training Force, (JCNTF Council®) which takes into consideration the current use of training standards, advances in technologies, and takes the nationwide workforce development initiative to the next level by adopting conferences, seminars, and networking activities for enhancement and benefit to its clients and the mission critical / data center industry.
