Haspel was the CIA's station chief in London in 2016 when the U.S. Embassy there was made aware of Mifsud's contact with a Trump campaign adviser, George Papadopoulos, by Australian diplomat Alexander Downer. Haspel was briefed on Downer's outreach to the embassy, according to a person familiar with the matter, but it's unclear whether she was then made aware of the FBI's plans to interview him or knew about the bureau's use of an informant — University of Cambridge professor Stefan Halper — in London.

3. Haspel's bio has her as Chief of Station Europe Division for 2014 - 2017. I couldn't find anything showing where that position is physically located but the excerpt in the article fm the 30 Jul drop states she was London Station Chief during that time.

A New Report Raises Big Questions About Last Year's DNC Hack

Former NSA experts say it wasn't a hack at all, but a leak—an inside job by someone with access to the DNC's system.

By Patrick Lawrence

onsicator's first decisive findings, made public in the paper dated July 9, concerned the volume of the supposedly hacked material and what is called the transfer rate—the time a remote hack would require. The metadata established several facts in this regard with granular precision: On the evening of July 5, 2016, 1,976 megabytes of data were downloaded from the DNC's server. The operation took 87 seconds. This yields a transfer rate of 22.7 megabytes per second.

These statistics are matters of record and essential to disproving the hack theory. No Internet service provider, such as a hacker would have had to use in mid-2016, was capable of downloading data at this speed. Compounding this contradiction, Guccifer claimed to have run his hack from Romania, which, for numerous reasons technically called delivery overheads, would slow down the speed of a hack even further from maximum achievable speeds.
