Wondering if he's the 2nd prosecutor w/the same mandate/authority as Huber that Q mentioned in Dec 2018.

Today I am announcing that we are creating a transnational organized crime Task Force of experienced prosecutors who will coordinate our efforts and develop a plan to take each of these groups off of our streets for good.

The new task force will be led by Deputy Attorney General Rosenstein. I want to thank Patrick Hovakimian in his office for stepping up and taking charge of this task.

The new Task Force will be organized into one subcommittee for each of these target organizations. I am confident that he is going to be very effective in his new role.

The subcommittee on MS-13 will be led by Assistant U.S. Attorney John Durham of the U.S. Attorney's Office for the Eastern District of New York. AUSA Durham has played a significant role in the FBI's Long Island Task Force, which has arrested hundreds of MS-13 members.

What if there's another prosecutor (outside of DC) assigned by SESSIONS w/ the same mandate/authority?

ONE FOR THE HISTORY BOOKS?

NOT LONG NOW.

Q

My bad...appears there are TWO John Durhams who are prosecutors. The one Sessions snagged for his Transnational Organized Crime Task Force is from Eastern District of NY and the one Barr snagged to look into Russia hoax origin is from CT. What are the odds?!

HA! Would ya look at that! Turns out the John Durham in Eastern District NY, who Sessions tapped to lead the MS-13 subcommittee of his Transnational Organized Crime Task Force is the SON of the John Durham just tapped by Barr for the Russia investigation!

Replying to @LisaMei62

(John J) "Durham, who began working for the Eastern District at its Brooklyn office in 2005, is the son of John H. Durham, the U.S. Attorney for Connecticut."
