

Augelle Thrower, Co-owner of Generational Financial Empowerment

Augelle is the inspiration for Generational Financial Empowerment. She taught me that children as young as 8 or 9 years old can learn and are interested in financial literacy. She has made her financial mistakes at a young age but as she started listening to Robert Kiyosaki narrate his story and started reading his books, Rich Dad Poor Dad and her all-time favorite, Retire Young Retire Rich she has basically stopped spending money on material things that she considers liabilities and has rewrote her life goals to acquire assets for early retirement!

She considers herself a real estate investor and currently works on networking with realtors, contractors, and other real estate investors to buy her next property. And she doesn't stop there she arises every weekend with great ideas for new businesses she plans to institute in the future. Her new life goals center around adding assets to her financial portfolio!

She will share more of her story during the financial instruction classes hoping to inspire other young people to rewrite their life goals and strive to add assets to their financial portfolio.
