

NOW HIRING TODDLER TEACHER

Please send your resume to Paula Evans Fitch,
Executive Director, at paula@tlcpaloalto.org.

The Learning Center of Palo Alto has been in operation since 1977. We provide an intimate, welcoming, nurturing, and engaging environment for children, families, and educators.

Our program focuses on an emergent curriculum, fosters a connection to nature, and provides a flexible rhythm where children freely flow from the indoor classroom to the outdoor classroom throughout the day.

We are looking for a toddler teacher to provide a warm, nurturing, play-focused, and child-centered program. You will conduct child observations, support children's learning and interests, create documentation of children's work, and develop age-appropriate emergent curriculum.

At The Learning Center, our outstanding educators are the heart and soul of our program. We select them for their exceptional skills in working with children of specific age groups and their unwavering dedication to the well-being of the children entrusted to them. Our TLC teachers are not just passionate about early childhood education; they are committed, creative, reflective, and informed professionals. They are self-starters who value collaboration with one another, parents, children, and the director to nurture the growth and development of the entire TLC Community. Your role here is not just a job. It's a vital part of our community.

Candidates will have:

- A minimum of an AA in Early Childhood Education
- A minimum of three years of experience working directly with children, 18 months – 36 months
- A passion for education and learning with young children
- The ability to develop partnerships with families
- Understanding of positive, supportive guidance and discipline methods
- Strong verbal and written communication skills
- The ability to physically stand, sit, lift, and move around easily in both indoor and outdoor environments
