Recently I have been finding myself disillusioned in service to NA and have to ask myself a couple things and be honest.

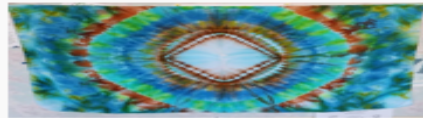

1. Am I checking my motives for those I serve
2. Am I wanting to serve the primary purpose

If I find anything but 2 solid yeses, I need to take a step back and work on being good to myself, not stroking my ego. When I am finding balance in my recovery and my service, these ?s, are an easy yes. When ego and self serving are in the lead, I shouldn't be...

I have been clean a minute and been blessed to have served the fellowship, our Area and those in my support group. A useful vessel for my God to work thru... Out of self and into solutions.

I have been recently reminded that everything in recovery ebbs and flows. As things change, I will continue to pray that the fundamentals, cornerstones of my recovery remain stable. God, Steps, Service and Fellowship.

CAPTURE THE FLAG

Staying clean a day at a time has been such a gift,

And a lot of things have gotten better over time.

Finding God that works daily for in in life,

Is more than I ever could Imagine....

With more time clean and growth being needed,

I am seeing the fact in we grow or we go.

Far from perfect and needing to look inside,

Recovery is for my spirit and not for show.

I am saddened at times that so much has changed,

And to hear that some have not felt a part of...

Changing some words or how we say things,

Will never produce any more unconditional Love.

Be good to yourself, you deserve it
