AI vs Physicians in 2050: Happy Future or No Future?

By: Erik Spitznagel, As seen on Medscape

Last February, Microsoft co-founder and billionaire philanthropist Bill Gates appeared on The Tonight Show and shared some bold predictions about artificial intelligence (AI). In just a decade, he told host Jimmy Fallon, AI will be capable of “great medical advice” and humans will no longer be needed “for most things.”

It's not the first time we've heard claims that AI will soon replace doctors, and it's usually hard to take seriously. But then just last month, on the heels of Gates's tech forecast, researchers at Google published a study introducing Articulate Medical Intelligence Explorer (AMIE), an AI system designed for clinical interactions and diagnostic dialogue.

The trial “involved specialist physicians and patient actors [and] assessed diagnostic accuracy, communication, empathy, and management reasoning,” says Mike Schaeckermann, PhD, a research scientist at Google Health involved in the study.

Your Peace Of Mind. Our Priority!

‘Most Favored Nation’ Drug Pricing Is the Headline — But the Real Crisis Runs Deeper

By: Marshall S. Runge, MD, PHD, as seen on Medpage Today

The outrage over prescription drug pricing in the U.S. is justified. Americans routinely pay two to three times more opens in a new tab or window for medications than patients in other high-income countries. Even drugs developed with American science and manufactured on American soil often cost less abroad.

President Trump recently announced the “Most Favored Nation” executive order opens in a new tab or window directing federal agencies to implement policies tying prescription drug prices to international price targets and to facilitate direct-to-consumer sales opens in a new tab or window at the most favored nation price. Meanwhile, congressional proposals opens in a new tab or window targeting drug price reform abound. These actions are a step in the right direction. But policymakers must recognize that drug costs, while politically potent, are only one part of a sprawling, inefficient healthcare system that continues to fail patients and taxpayers alike.

The CFPB wanted medical debt to be left off credit reports. That’s changed under Trump

By: Vanessa Romo, as seen on Wbur

David Deeds is in financial trouble, and he’s hoping a federal court in Texas can help get him out of it.

Deeds, who is 62 and owes tens of thousands of dollars in medical debt from cancer treatment, is involved in a complicated lawsuit filed by credit industry groups over the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau’s medical debt rule.

The rule, finalized in January just weeks before the end of the Biden administration, would have banned the reporting of medical debt from credit reports.

9 Mom & Pop Restaurants In Texas That Serve Home Cooked Meals To Die For

By: Katie Lawrence, as seen on Only in your state

Southern country cookin' and a friendly atmosphere -- these are by far our favorite kinds of restaurants. We value quality food and hospitable service over a fancy atmosphere any day. Here are a few of the best mom-and-pop restaurants in Texas. These eateries will make your heart (and taste buds) happy. Come out and enjoy - maybe even make a whole Texas foodie road trip out of 'em!

Blue Bonnet Cafe, in the hill country, is known all over Texas for having some of the best home cookin' and southern hospitality around. From classic country breakfasts of eggs, bacon, sausage, and buttery biscuits to some of the crispiest, most tender chicken fried steak you'll ever eat for lunch or dinner, Blue Bonnet will fulfill your taste buds' wildest dreams and then some. And let's not forget about the most decadent pie that will ever pass your lips. Dessert is definitely what this cafe is known for above anything else.
