

Winter Workshop January 22, 2023

FACULTY BIOS

Tap

CORY LUNNY - World Tap Champion Cory Lunny is from North Andover, MA, and teaches full time at her home studio, Nancy Chippendale's Dance Studios. She enjoys teaching and choreographing for all dance styles and ages there, but her specialty and first love is tap dance. Cory is a founding member, assistant director, coach, performer, and world champion choreographer for the American Tap Company, which is an all-star, nationwide tap team dedicated to training, competing, and performing all over the world. In addition, she regularly teaches master classes, choreographs, and performs all over the United States and Europe. In 2020, she was appointed to the International Dance Organization's (IDO) Dancers' Commission, and in 2022, became the chair of this committee, where she represents dancers all over the world from many disciplines of the performing arts at IDO Presidium meetings and IDO events.

Contemporary

TRISTAN MARSHALL - Tristan Marshall, originally from Massachusetts, received his Bachelor of the Arts in Dance from Hofstra University in 2019. Throughout his time at Hofstra, Tristan received many accolades for his choreography. Since graduating, he has found a love for teaching & working with young students. Tristan strives to create a safe space to learn, grow & challenge each student he works with. He fuses athleticism & technique, with artistry & passion, and loves instilling this in the next generation. He has gotten to share his knowledge with many studios along the East Coast, ranging from one-day workshops & intensives, to choreographing around 15-30 competition dances per year. Aside from teaching, he just finished performing with DanceWorks New York City and had choreographed three pieces for their company; one virtual & two main stage. Lastly, and most recently, he has worked in the Competition Dance scene as an Emcee/Host. This past January to May, he travelled around the NorthEast region with Spirit of Dance Awards, as a Backstage Manager, as well. He's excited to continue growing as an Artist & Educator, and continue expanding his network of whom to share his love of dance with!

CONTINUED ON NEXT PAGE

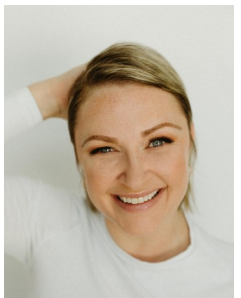

Winter Workshop January 22, 2023

FACULTY BIOS

Ballet

TARA IACOBUCCI - Beginning her studies at a young age in all genres of dance, Tara later transitioned into performing a variety of ballets with Festival Ballet Providence. Fast forward, Tara is now the director of the award-winning dance companies at The Talent Factory in Rhode Island, where many of her students have gone on to accept prestigious scholarships at such places as Marymount Manhattan College, Montclair State University, Elon University, PACE University, as well as professional schooling and companies overseas! She is currently on staff with a couple of competition/convention circuits, and travels often to share her love of this art around the country. Her choreography was chosen to be a part of the Boston Contemporary Dance Festival during its inception, and most recently she premiered work at the Joyce Theater in NYC. In 2019, Tara had the pleasure of visiting Joffrey Ballet's Jazz & Contemporary Pre-Professional Training Program in New York City to hold her own audition and cast dancers for a piece she choreographed for their Spring show. Tara was thrilled to get the opportunity to expand her knowledge within the industry when taking on, and participating in, a few film projects. The most recent film project was with close friend and inspiration, Andy Pellick, that was graciously promoted by Dance Teacher Magazine. Tara strives to emphasize the importance of never feeling complacent and always remaining a student. Most recently, Tara has become excited to share and dance with all of the talent at Dean College taking the role of an adjunct faculty member in Fall 2021.

Jazz

LINDSEY KLEIN - Lindsey Klein was born and raised in Massachusetts. A former student of Patti Eisenhauer, she continued her training at The University of the Arts. There, she received her BFA in Jazz Performance. Lindsey's performing career started straight out of college where she worked for Walt Disney World and Norwegian Cruise lines. She currently is on staff with Norwegian as an audition choreographer. Lindsey was on faculty at Dean College for seven years, and recently has started guest teaching at Boston Conservatory. She also is a proud full-time teacher at the Patti Eisenhauer Dance center. Lindsey resides in Franklin, MA with her husband and three children.