Sorry that simply won't work for obvious reasons.

In this situation without appeals, the same judges who made a flawed decision are the only ones who can correct it. That's like grading your own test.

Even if unintentional, a lack of appellate review can lead to unchecked authority or bias—especially in high-stakes matters like land rights, custody, or banishment.

If ARNA doesn't have an appellate court, it can combine multiple practices to strengthen the justice system:

1. Use juries made of citizens/nationals to democratize decisions.
2. Ensure written decisions by judges so rulings can be reviewed later if needed.
3. Create a tribal "review board" or ad hoc appeal panel, even if informal, using retired judges, elders, or judges from other tribal nations.

The only reason you all would not want Tribal Jury Duty in an event like this would likely be fear of losing power or control, even if it's problematic to the entire ARNA system. This spells corruption inside the nation.

AKA a virus in the body-politic.

I appreciate being open to solutions. Why not consider this. Arkan and Trazell aren't the only ones that would be problematic judging this case in this situation with me btw. Just trying to fix issues going on internally with my Nation G.

It's international standard that courts...including Tribal Courts have an Appeal Process.

I also stated that abuse of tribal court procedures are illegal on a international level including a U.S federal level.

I stated... I'd like to have that Notice of Appeal filed. However you're filing this information

Act corrupt however hard that you want to.
