Bill has been a first responder in military, law, fire, and EMS since 1975. During this period watching and experiencing the stresses of the first responder role, Bill is inspired to help with behavioral health issues through active service as a peer support team member and serving on the board of 911for911.org.

Bill is passionate about serving those who are impacted by trauma and helping them to return to their fullest life through funding opportunities available in our communities.
