Egyptian Granite

Ramadi El Sherka is famous for its pale-gray and white graining texture and for silver grey tones—that is highly selected for its indoor and outdoor applications.

Ramadi El Sherka grey granite A diverse mixture of colors and unrivaled durability is what Egyptian Granite is famous for. Granite provides a room a sophisticated impression while maintaining the toughness of one of the hardest natural stone surfaces. It may be used in a variety of building projects. Granite panels are used for wall cladding, granite tiles are used for flooring both indoors and outdoors, with different finish and granite slabs are used for cooking surfaces.

Polished Egyptian Granite

Polished Finish: Granite polished to a glossy finish brings out the full color and character of the granite. Ideal for countertops and accent walls, but not recommended for commercial floors or exterior projects.

The most traditional finish for granite is a polished, shiny finish. It lends a classy, high-end look to any room and is impressive when used in highly visible areas. To keep that high sheen on a granite floor, maintenance polishing will be necessary to take out normal wear marks like fine etches and scratches.

Flamed Egyptian Granite

The flamed finish is a specialized technique employed in the granite industry to enhance the texture and appearance of natural stone surfaces. In this process, the granite slab is subjected to intense heat, often through controlled exposure to an open flame. The extreme temperature causes the crystals in the stone to burst and change their structure, creating a rough, textured surface. This finish is particularly popular for outdoor applications such as paving, as the rough texture enhances slip resistance.
