FESTIVAL IN THE PARK – MESSY CHURCH

Messy Church were at the Festival in the Park on 7th July. Here is a picture of some of the Lego ducks that children made when given a small bag with a set of bricks in. Well done all who made them – so many different species of duck from identical contents! There were also butterflies and friendship bracelets to be made and lots of information about our church on display. Huge thanks to those who helped man our stall there.

BERYL'S BLOG

If it involves food – count me in! Mr Kipling and cakes – I'm on a winner! When I see them on the shelves, I am reminded of an old joke from my school days. The lesson was English Literature and the speaker was our teacher.

'Do you enjoy Kipling?' she said – and followed it with, 'I don't know, I've never Kippled!' She had a smile on her face, and we all got the joke. It was, of course, aimed at the literary genius, not the baker – but it still makes me smile. You can imagine my delight whilst scrolling down the TV Guide recently when I spotted the title, 'Accessories from Kipling'. I was between programmes so quickly hit the 'scheduled viewing' button from the remote control so that the programme would appear at the appropriate time – didn't want to miss it. What would it involve? An array of kitchen utensils for baking; a selection of gadgets to add the final touches; a cookery book of recipes to make your own versions at home.

The programme started. I was listening to manufacturing; product availability; sales outlets; personal choices; compact styling – what's it all about? During the documentary voiceover there were photographs of suitcases; holdalls; handbags etc. – not a cake in sight! I switched back to the programme guide and selected 'info' on the remote control. Apparently 'Kipling' is a European fashion brand manufacturing suitcases, handbags and travel accessories. Who knew?

I'm hoping Mr Kipling comes up with something similar!!

Take care. Love Beryl. x

THE WANDERING CHORISTERS On Tuesday 23rd July we travelled to New Brighton for our weekly walk. We arrived around midday. The weather was glorious; unlike the last time we were there when we got drenched! We had taken a picnic with us so it was decided that we would eat that first before departing on our walk. The sky was so blue and reflected beautifully on the ocean. There were paddle boarders skimming across the surf and youngsters paddling in the sea. It was lovely to see everyone enjoying the sunny weather.

Our walk took us on a path that followed the coast and eventually to Leasowe; we passed a few people walking and several cyclists. Eventually the path led us onto a sandy beach where a number of people and children were enjoying the sun and flying kites. We stopped and decided we would rest our tired legs before turning back, so we sat on a couple of large boulders set back on the beach. We got chatting to a lady who offered to take a couple of pictures of us both as I was struggling to see the camera button because the sun was so bright. In fact, she had a similar problem, but managed to take some for us. She said she lived in Bromborough. We chatted for a little while before saying our goodbyes and retraced our steps back towards New Brighton. We had a look around the shops and then decided we'd finish our lovely day off with a cup of coffee in Costa. We had a lovely day, full of fun, laughter and friendship. Until our next adventure, God Bless you all, Jeanie & Barbara.
