INTRODUCING THE PULSE OXIMETER (Pulse OX)

A pulse oximeter, or pulse ox, is a small, electronic device that measures the oxygen saturation of blood and heart rate by shining light through a fingertip. The device clips onto the finger and emits light that passes through the skin, tissue, fingernail, and blood. A sensor on the other side of the finger measures how much light passes through without being absorbed by the blood and tissue, and the device uses that measurement to calculate blood oxygen saturation.

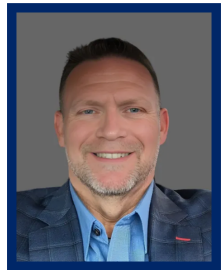

Contact us today to find out if you qualify for a new pulse oximeter.
