

Welcome to Today's Clinician

It gives me immense pleasure to present the first issue of 'Today's Clinician', a medical journal intended at medical practitioners. 'Today's Clinician' is a tribute to late Pascoal Menezes a pioneer in pharmaceuticals and health journalism whose 'O Clinico' was a leading medical journal in pre-independence era (1932). After the liberation of Goa in 1967, the journal was renamed as 'The Clinician' and continued publication until 1990.

Today's Clinician is the new incarnation of 'The Clinician' and is seeing the light of the day due to Mr. Cesar Menezes' commitment to continue the good work initiated by his father. Despite the rapid proliferation of multimedia, medical professionals still prefer to keep themselves abreast of the latest developments in the medical field through medical journals.

This journal not only focuses on the latest developments in modern medicine and treatment but also carries articles in alternative medicine, such as Ayurveda, Homoeopathy, Naturopathy, Acupuncture and Yoga.

The journal strongly believes in unbiased dissemination of knowledge of diagnosis, treatment methods and new medical techniques through articles and case studies written by leading medical professional in India and around the world. The journal would not be restricted to print media alone but will soon be available in all forms of digital media including internet, mobile and social media.

In this first edition we bring to you the latest techniques in medical simulation that will help medical practitioners master their techniques of diagnosis and treatment in a risk-free environment. This is going to be a significant step in medical practice that boosts the confidence of doctors and enhances the success rate of critical illness treatment. This edition also carries several research studies in modern medicine as well as useful insights into alternative medicinal practices.

Please let us know what you thought about the journal and how we can make it more relevant for your specific needs. In anticipation of your support, encouragement and feedback.
