A live film history presentation spanning the past 80 years

It is impossible to capture and catalog a comprehensive collection of photography, film, and music that sufficiently reflects all that African Americans have brought to the ever-evolving culture of the United States over the past 80 years.

But in this 80-minute presentation, narrator John LeGear examines some of the many ways African American writers, musicians, and performers have enriched the “American Experience.” Please join us for this lyrical, thought-provoking multi-media presentation. It’ll set your toes to tappin’ and bring joy to your heart.

A brief Question & Answer period with open discussion will follow the show.
