Human Rights Passwords

The Council of Europe was founded in London in May 1949, and to this day, the Council of Europe continues its long-standing commitment to human rights education with young people by supporting a new series of national training courses. These activities are part of a strategic effort to promote education for democratic citizenship and human rights (EDC/HRE) across Europe, in line with the Council's core mission to uphold human rights, democracy, and the rule of law. The 2025 Compass programme responds to priorities set out in the Roadmap for Education for Democratic Citizenship and Human Rights Education with Young People (2024–2028) and the Council of Europe's Youth Sector Strategy 2030, focusing on supporting key multipliers, strengthening national networks, and ensuring quality in non-formal human rights education. This training course is organised in cooperation with the Youth Department of the Council of Europe within the Youth for Democracy programme.

In this context, AICEM and the London Borough of Newham's Youth Empowerment Service are proud to partner with the Council of Europe's Youth Department to deliver a Compass training course in London in 2025. This five-day course will bring together youth workers, educators, community leaders, and activists to build their capacities as human rights educators. With a focus on non-formal learning and practical tools, the training aims to develop participants' knowledge, skills, and commitment to human rights, while contributing to stronger national frameworks and communities of practice in the UK.

Council of Europe

The Council of Europe has 46 member states (including the United Kingdom) that work on issues of democracy, human rights, and the rule of law. From the Congress of The Hague in 1948 throughout its history, youth organisations and young people have played a crucial role in safeguarding the values of this organisation.

A key element of the Council of Europe's work is human rights education and has several charters and recommendations aimed at supporting young people in accessing and understanding their human rights, including the Charter on Education for Democratic Citizenship and Human Rights Education.

The Youth Department of the Council of Europe has published several manuals and toolkits to support human rights education with young people, including Compass, the manual for human rights education with young people.

"Human rights passwords" will explore the human rights frameworks that affect young people and give them the tools to promote human rights and human rights education in their local communities.

Aims and objectives of the training course

This training course aims to contribute to the Council of Europe's strategic priorities for 2025 by strengthening the role of young people in promoting human rights and democratic citizenship, and demonstrates its relevance today by:

- Promoting human rights (HR) among young people (18 – 25) living in the UK and exploring ways young people can use both offline and online tools to exercise and defend democratic rights and use them to engage and influence political decisions related to Human Rights (HR) and Human Rights Education (HRE).

- Empowering youth workers and actors working with youth, and in particular young migrants, refugees, and asylum seekers, with tools and methodologies on HRE to support participants in implementing concrete actions through their organisations and new projects, and positively influencing local authorities on the importance of HRE.
- Participants will also have the opportunity to engage and reflect in an art exhibition on Human Rights designed by refugees and asylum seekers, and, together with those and the community, share aspirations and proposals for local actions and initiatives to advocate for refugees and asylum seekers' rights across the UK. This initiative will be held in the Youth Empowerment Service of the London Borough of Newham and will host several local, national, and international representatives.

Objectives of the event

1. To strengthen participants' understanding of key concepts of human rights and human rights education and their ability to put them into practice with young people in a diverse society, including relevant mechanisms and instruments (charters, declarations, conventions).
2. To develop essential competencies, skills and attitudes to act as multipliers and advocates working with human rights education in non-formal learning settings, including familiarising participants with the approaches of the Compass manual.
3. To raise awareness about the main dilemmas Human Rights advocates, educators, and activists face in today's world: conflicts, the rise of the far-right, fake news and disinformation
4. To develop a skill set to protect and promote our cultural, social economic rights.
5. The training aims to strengthen the informal network of human rights educators and advocates in the UK, which was informally established during last year's edition of the national training course Human Rights Password, organised in partnership with AICEM, London Borough of Newham's Youth Empowerment Service, and the Youth Department of the Council of Europe.

Programme and outcomes

The youth event will bring together 25 representatives of local, regional, national youth councils, parliament, youth organisations, and youth work professionals for a 5-day programme using participatory approaches characteristic of non-formal education and youth work. A human rights art exhibition will be featured during the programme with the support of WeRestart.

Why the London Borough of Newham's Youth Empowerment Service?

Partnering with the London Borough of Newham for the 2025 Compass training course reflects a shared commitment to advancing youth empowerment and human rights education in one of the most vibrant and diverse areas of the UK. Newham Council has established a strong focus on supporting young people through its Youth Empowerment Service, Early Help Strategy, and Young People's Charter, with particular attention to safeguarding, inclusive participation, and tackling exploitation, inequality, and mental health challenges. By hosting this training, the borough reinforces its dedication to equipping young people with the tools to become active citizens, challenge discrimination, and contribute to shaping their communities.

Newham's demographic diversity, history of regeneration, and socio-economic challenges make it a powerful location for this initiative. The Compass training course offers a strategic opportunity to deepen local efforts around human rights education, especially for youth affected by structural barriers, migration, and exclusion. Through this collaboration, Newham Council is helping foster a culture of human rights at the community level, strengthening partnerships between institutions, civil society, and youth, and creating long-term impact by supporting the next generation of human rights educators and advocates.

Profile of participants

The youth event is primarily designed to bring together participants who are either:

- a) representatives of a local, regional, national youth council or national organisations of a similar scope
- b) representatives of youth organisations,
- c) young activists, facilitators and leaders active in human rights and democracy projects or campaigns or education
- d) UK youth delegates to the Congress of Local and Regional Authorities.
- e) teachers, University students, civil servants and government representatives with an interest and/or responsibilities in areas directly linked with the theme of this training course
- f) Ideally, come from diverse backgrounds, with a priority on inclusion: migrants, asylum seekers, refugees, young people not in education/employment/training, disabled and/or SEN young people, LGBTQIA+ young people, care-experienced young people, and young people not belonging to the global majority.

Participants must:

- be in a position to multiply and follow up on the conclusions of the training
- be a resident or inhabitant of the United Kingdom, and specifically be a resident of the London Borough of Newham
- 20% of places will be reserved for young people living in neighbouring boroughs.
- be aged between 18-25 years (exception can be made if explained)
- be able to work autonomously in English (if sign language or additional interpretation is required, please get in touch with the organisers before applying)
- be available for the entire duration of the training

Application procedure and selection of participants

All candidates must duly complete the online application form via this Link

The deadline for submitting applications is Friday, 12th September at 1 pm

The partners will select up to 25 participants based on the above profile, ensuring a balance between genders, age, diverse experiences, backgrounds, organisations, institutions, and projects. A waiting list may be established. Candidates will be informed by 20th September 2025 whether their application has been accepted or rejected, and if they have been put on the waiting list.

The Council of Europe welcomes applications from all candidates who fulfil the specific profile of the activities, irrespective of gender, disability, marital or parental status, racial, ethnic or social origin, colour, religion, belief or sexual orientation.
