Why does the system log me out periodically now?

As hackers continue to get more adept at obtaining our personal data, some sites will automatically and randomly log you out of their system as a security measure. The hosting service we use (GoDaddy) is one of them. While this is an extra layer of security that works well for the financial or medical industries, it's not always convenient for others. In those cases, opting to have your browser save passwords and autofill your login ID and password will make things easier.
