A warm welcome to the new DutZ Collection catalogue.

We have created a new catalogue to inspire you with stylish photography, trendy items and vibrant new colours.

New items like Pilon, Lacrima, Nature and more.

And warm new summer colours like mandarin and yellow.

As with all our previous collections, once again this one is stunning! We have a passion for wonderful handcrafted and mouthblown glassware made by real artisan craftsmen.

The beauty can be found in the unique details and individual variations of each single piece in our collection.

DutZ: Durf Uitgesproken Te Zijn / Dare to be distinct

DutZ Collection is characterized by the quality and character of mouth-blown artisan products. No product is identical to one another. Each piece in the collection is the result of dedicated craftsmanship.

GLASS: THE - MAKING

This is how our glass is produced in Eastern European factories. With a steel pipe, one gets molten glass from a furnace. In case of colored glass, a finely ground glass powder is fused on the ball and caught between two layers of clear glass. The object is blown in a wooden mold. This gives the object its shape on the lower half. The wooden mold burns out each time a little, resulting in unique vases with their own character. Then a steel rod (pontil) is glued with a small piece of hot glass to the bottom. The glassblower breaks the object from the blowpipe. The object is taken over by the pontil. On the place where glass was on the pipe, there is a hole. By heating the object in an oven at temperatures of approximately 1,200 degrees, the material is softened. The master blower gives the vase the desired shape and finishes the edge. When the model is finished, it goes into the annealing furnace. The glass is slowly cooled and this process releases the pressure from the material and it prevents spontaneously breaking. The bonding surface of the pontil is neatly cut. Glass blowing is a difficult craft to master. There is a lot of talent, patience and good training needed. The use of this traditional method confers each DutZ item a very special character.
