VISION

To support and empower Transition Age Youth (ages 18-25) to live independently.
Transition Age Youth (TAY) is a program designed specifically for young adults aged 18-25. TAY programming prepares young adults with their transition into adult roles through an individualized process. Programming is designed to enhance community involvement and promote self-sufficiency and achievement of individualized goals. The program captures young people’s attention and enables them to focus on their future. Program services are held in dedicated TAY space at Channel Marker’s program facilities.

FOR THE INDIVIDUAL

Discover what your strengths are; set educational and vocational goals; and learn how you can become clear about what you want and need out of life and how to successfully achieve it.

Channel Marker strives to create an atmosphere where new friendships are made and current relationships are strengthened. Groups and individual sessions target new skills that will better equip you to experience success and satisfaction in every major area of your life.

Joining Channel Marker’s Transition Age Youth program will help you move forward in ways that you may not have known were possible. A key component to the program is linking participants with available community resources.
